SCHOONER WRECKED ON CHATHAM BAR IN GREAT GALE

ALL LOST

Body of Woman Washed Ashore from Craft and Lifesavers Are Certain Entire Crew Has Been Drowned—Wreck Washed by Mountainous Seas.

Special to the Boston American.

CHATHAM, Oct. 14.—The body of a woman, swept by mountainous seas from the three-masted English schooner, which went ashore on the north bar, a short distance south of the Old Harbor life saving station, together with all of the crew, was washed ashore near here to-day.

There are no signs of life on the schooner now, and the life-savers are certain that all hands are lost. The schooner was swept during the night by seas masthead high, and every effort of the life-saving crews of the Old Harbor, Chatham and Orleans stations, working together, to get a line across her failed.

WENT ASHORE LAST NIGHT.

The schooner went ashore on the bar because of low tide about 7:30 o'clock last night. She is a three-master, from Windsor, evidently loaded with plaster, but her name is not known. She had anchored off Chatham during the evening, fearing to go through the Pollock Rip slue in the heavy sea, and her cable parted.

The sea was so heavy at the time that it would have been impossible for a lifeboat to live an instant. Captain Doane, of the old Harbor Station, brought his line gun close to the water's edge and sent a shot toward the schooner. The line went out, and it was thought it had reached a schooner, in which a light was then visible, through her cabin windows.

LINE DID NOT REACH.

A whip line was sent on and went out with the pull, but in a few moments the lines came back. A second attempt failed and it was then realized that the distance to the vessel was too great for the line gun and gear.

Superintendent Bowles of the Life Saving Service, who lives at East Orleans, went in person to the scene of the wreck and ordered the crews of the Chatham and Orleans stations, under Captains Charles and Eldridge, to the assistance of Captain Doane. The three lifeboats were drawn up on the beach, in the hope that a moment would come when they could be launched, but the surf rolling in like great hills of water made a launching impossible.

TORCHES BURNED OUT.

At this time the schooner was burning distress torches. The seas were raking her and it seemed that at almost any moment she would be pounded to pieces and her shattered timbers swept ashore on the heavy seas. By 10 o'clock the distress torches had ceased to glow, and it was then feared that all on board had been lost.

The three life-saving crews kept vigil all this morning, when the sea was still running so that it was impossible for help to reach the schooner. It was then apparent that there was no life aboard her. The belief that all on board were lost was partly confirmed by the finding, in the boiling surf, of the body of a woman.

There were no marks on her clothing by which she can be identified. It is thought she was the wife of the captain of the schooner. It is expected that the bodies of others of the crew will be cast up by the sea later in the day.

During the night the seas swept over the doomed schooner masthead high. The sea, always rough off the Roaring Bull, was in its most turbulent state, and although the lifeboat was got in readiness by the crew, they realized that it would be madness to attempt to launch it.

All night the crew waited, after their efforts to get a line to the schooner had failed, in momentary expectation of seeing the schooner go to pieces and her crew perish before their eyes.

NAME IS NOT KNOWN.

Superintendent Bowley sent Captain Charles and the crew of the Orleans station to the aid of Captain Doane, and Superintendent Bowles, who lives at East Orleans, went himself to the scene of the wreck. The combined efforts of the crews, however, could do nothing, and the situation had not improved when daylight dawned to-day. The heavy seas were still breaking over the schooner.

PATROL WAS ESTABLISHED.

At 11 o'clock last night twenty experienced life savers, with two surf boats and two guns with breeches buoy attachments, were assembled on the beach. At that time there were lights visible through the cabin windows, but the side lights had been washed away. The schooner's foremast was up, but her other canvas apparently had been carried away.

Captain Eldridge and the Chatham crew joined the others, and a patrol was established. Had the schooner gone to pieces during the night the heroic life savers would have made a desperate attempt to launch a boat, in the hope of saving the crew.

ALL ARE POWERLESS.

Captain Doane's latest statement was:

"We have all the help that is needed, and our gear has worked splendidly, but we are powerless to help those men. The sea is breaking over her masthead high, and I would not be surprised to see bits of her crumbling timbers coming ashore at any moment. I am afraid this will be a night of loss of life off this station, but the combined crews will not run a minute if they can render aid. as soon as possible, if the craft is seen to hold together, we shall pick one boat's crew out of the two stations and try to get out, but I have no idea this will be possible. The sea is raking her terribly."

RUSSIAN ARMY ROUTED WITH AWFUL SLAUGHTER

Kuropatkin Driven Back Along His Whole Line, After Four Days of Terrific Fighting, and Disaster Is Said to Be Complete.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—General Kuropatkin's army, crushed and badly beaten, is in full retreat after four days of the most terrible fighting the world has ever known.

The Russians are now fleeing to escape capture or annihilation, just as they did after evacuating Liao-Yang, with the Japanese closely following up their advantage gained at a cost of over 20,000 lives to both sides. If they succeed in cutting the retreating legions of Russians to pieces it will end the Winter's campaign and may bring the war to a close.

After four days of desperate fighting, resulting from Kuropatkin's right-about-face movement to relieve Port Arthur, the Russian centre has been driven back, the Russian right has lost twenty-five guns to General Oku's division, and the Russian left has been crushed and is fleeing toward the Hun River, with General Kuroki in hot pursuit.

650,000 MEN ENGAGED.

Engaged in the great conflict have been about 650,000 men. Kuropatkin did not begin his advance and "thrust his head into the lion's mouth" until he had received reenforcements sufficient to swell his forces to 350,000 men, while opposed to him were about 300,000 men, under the wily Oyama. The Japanese eagerly accepted the first chance of the war to meet their foes in the open, unprotected by strong entrenchments which must be taken by storm, and caught Kuropatkin unawares before he had properly disposed of his forces.

The last day of the battle south of Mukden was marked by bitter cold and a drenching rainstorm, the advance of a Manchurian Winter.

Dispatches received from field headquarters of the Japanese left armuy dated Monday say: The left army made an advance last night and early this morning, attacked along the whole line, driving the Russians out of the positions which they retired to yesterday. At 3 o'clock this afternoon the Russians were retreating northward in disorder. The Japanese captured a complete Russian battery. The Japanese are pursuing and shelling the retreating Russians, whose loss is probably large.

The victory to-day was a decisive one. The Russians fought bravely. The left wing of the left army threatened to envelop the Russian right, compelling the Russians to retreat.

The Standard's correspondent in the field with General Kuroki, says:

"After two days' heavy fighting the enemy's resistance was broken this afternoon, and the Russians are now in full retreat.

Describing a fight for a rock surmounted by a picturesque pagoda, the correspondent says:

"At times it was a hand-to-hand conflict. The Russians fought hard and desperately, but were no match for the Japanese infantry. Their retirement was very leisurely and the guns in particular remained on the ground longer than seemed safe."

DEAD LEFT ON FIELD.

The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent asserts that the pursuit by the Japanese

POLICE SEEK WORCESTER SLAYER HERE

Assert They Have Man Who Killed Frank P. Sharkey Under Surveillance.

ARREST EXPECTED SOON

The Boston police are looking for the murderer of Frank P. Sharkey, of Worcester, who was stabbed to death in his home at Prescott street, Worcester, on October 3.

The description of the murderer which has been sent out broadcast is as follows:

Thirty-five to thirty-eight years old, about five feet seven inches tall, 160 pounds weight, stocky build, medium complexion, light stubby moustache, bald headed, has scalp wound on back of head, index finger of left hand cut at middle joint, wore dark clothing and old soft hat.

The Worcester police have failed to obtain any clue to the murderer after he was seen leaving the Sharkey house. Sharkey was thirty-four years old and lived with his mother and sister. On coming home at noon October 3 he found a strange man in his room with a gold watch in his hand which had been taken from a bureau. Springing upon the thief, he endeavored to wrest it from him when the thief dropped the watch, and opening a large pocketknife, stabbed Sharkey in the abdomen, inflicting what proved to be a fatal wound.

During the scrimmage Miss Mary Sharkey, a schoolteacher, entered the room, and seizing a croquet mallet, beat the burglar about the head, inflicting several wounds.

The Boston police claim they have their man located in Boston and an arrest is expected.

LADY CURZON IS VERY WEAK AND EXHAUSTED

WALMER CASTLE, Eng., Oct. 14.—Grave anxiety is felt about Lady Curzon, whose condition remains unchanged. She is reported to be very weak and exhausted.

COACHERS BOUND FOR BOSTON.

LENOX, Oct. 14.—A coaching party from Burlington, Vt., bound for Boston, has arrived at Lenox, and will spend several days here before the tour is resumed. C. Davis, jr., of Nahant, is whip, and the party includes Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Higelow, Mrs. Henry Sheldon of Boston and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Green of Albany.

UNIONS READY FOR LONG SIEGE AT FALL RIVER

Assessment May Be Asked From Members of Federation of Labor.

CHIEF NEED IS FUNDS

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 14.—Labor leaders are preparing to continue the great textile strike for an indefinite period. Their chief effort is to raise money. More collectors are leaving for the West daily. Secretary J. G. Jackson, of the Stashers' Union, is in favor of asking the American Federation of Labor to impose a small weekly assessment upon all members in aid Fall River strikers. The Stasher's branch, of which Mr. Jackson is vice-president, has no authority to take such action, and it can only be done through President Gompers and the national executive board. Mr. Jackson thinks the plan feasible because no other general strike now exists in the country.

The carders have decided to suspend benefits to themselves for a week and to leave it to their secretary how often they should be paid in the future.

President John Golden, of the United Textile Workers, says that the strikers will win. He said:

"We can conduct the strike on business principles, even if the managers cannot run the mills that way. Thus strike will be conducted systematically and to a victorious finish. It is the first general strike in Fall River's history, and at the end operatives will look into the unions as never before. We are sharing as best we can with non-union operatives. Had they belonged to unions, and been paying dues for years, we might now be quite independent of aid from other States and cities."

GIRL HIT HIGHWAYMAN WITH FIST, THEN ESCAPED

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Ability to strike out from the shoulder and footnose of foot acquired by practice in the gymnasium enabled Miss Mary Gunsaulus, daughter of Dr. Frank Gunsaulus, to rout a highway man and escape without injury. As Miss Gunsaulus was walking along a dark street a man rushed out a big stone which he carried in the other hand. Miss Gunsaulus's right list flew out and landed on the robber's face. He staggered back and the young woman fled.

TRACK ELEVATION, $6,000,000.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 14.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford road's plan for the elevation of the railroad tracks through this city calls for the expenditure of about $6,000,000, of which amount about $1,000,000 would fall upon the city.

ARMED MEN IN MAINE AFTER AN INCENDIARY

Three Fires in One Week Arouse Residents to Action to Protect.

YORK, Me., Oct. 14.—Armed men, under orders to shoot to kill, are patrolling here night and day. This action was taken because of the numerous fires here, all of incendiary origin. There have been three fires this week.

The last was in a cottage owned by W. B. Cole, of Lebanon, N. H., and situated in the midst of nearly a hundred cottages. The prompt arrival of the local fire department kept the flames from spreading, despite the high wind, and the damage was not great.

Two cottages were burned a day or so since, and a few days previous a large car barn was destroyed. Owners believe all three fires were the work of incendiaries.

COOLIDGE, OF FITCHBURG, IS OUT FOR CONGRESS

Martin A. Coolidge, of Fitchburg, was nominated by the Fourth District Democratic Congressional Convention, by a rising vote. Mr. Coolidge, in his speech of acceptance, promised the convention that he would repeat the hustling, canvass for election which he made two years ago.

RUSSIANS, CRUSHED AND BEATEN, IN RETREAT, FIGHTING FIERCELY TO ESCAPE ANNIHILATION

is working great havoc to the dissipirited Russians, who left their dead and wounded on the field.

From Tokio comes the news that Kuropatkin has been decisively whipped and severely punished. The Russian commander was evidently caught with his forces scattered, and he was beaten before he could recover.

The Japanese yesterday began a desperate effort to turn the Russian right, and if this effort should be successful it will carry disaster to the Russian arms.

The Russian force around Mukden is estimated at 5,000, and its isolation or loss would be a severe blow.

An extended report received from the headquarterss of the Manchurian armies, a brief summary of which is published this afternoon, indicates that the Japanese were generally successful in the fighting of yesterday, and that all three of the Japanese armies gained decided advantages.

25 GUNS CAPTURED.

The Japanese left, General Oku's army, alone captured twenty-five guns.

The numbers engaged in the struggle exceed the forces which fought at Liao Yang.

In some places the fighting surpassed in desperation anything shown since the war began.

A telegram covering yesterday's operations, which arrived here to-day, says:

"In the direction of Mukden the enemy's attacks have been repulsed at all points. Communication with Chiaote has been firmly established.

"The pursuit of the enemy undertaken by the main force of the right and centre armies has progressed remarkably.

"A line from Mukden to Manchuafan has been reached. There a body of the enemy, possessing guns, was enveloped by us and thrown into great confusion, while another portion of the enemy's forces appears to have fled northward.

"The right army has sent a detachment toward Shihchiaotan for the purpose of cutting off the retreat of the enemy posted at Benihu, and this detachment will reach its destination about 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"According to statements made by prisoners, General Kuropatkin, with three divisions, was in the rear of the force confronting our right army. The centre and left columns of this army, after driving a strong force of the enemy before them, took the Russian positions at Langtzuchieh and its vicinity at 1.30 p. m., and captured eight guns. The enemy fled in disorder to the north, and our forces, pursuing them immediately, advanced toward Liuhaochiatun.

RIGHT COLUMN'S VICTORY.

"The right column, after encountering fierce resistance, successfully dislodged the enemy.

"Our force was engaged in pursuing the enemy toward Lungwangmiao at 1.30 this afternoon.

The Manchurian headquarters reported to-day as follows:

"Our right army has been pursuing the enemy northward.

"The column which was dispatched in the direction of Sukchiatan to intercept the retreat of the enemy from Benihu, continues its operations.

"The central army continues its attack on the Russians and expects to occupy the line between TuTugshankou and Hachiakchiatan to-day. The enemy in this direction appeared to retreat continuously until dusk last evening.

"A report that a large column of the enemy is moving to the southwest and is commencing the erection of defensive works at Chienhaungchiatien cannot be verified.

"The enemy's two counter attacks against the centre column of teh left army were very daring, but these attacks were repulsed with heavy infantry fire.

"The supports and the artillery reserves advanced to Kaochiatun and vicinity, driving the Russians from Hunchiatien.

"The right wing of the left column of the centre army captured 150 prisoners."

COACHMAN SUES FOR $25,000

PITTSFIELD, Oct. 14.—The suit of Thomas W. Conklin, coachman for Dr. Frank W. Brandow, against Frank R. Whittlesy, a prominent member of the First church and Sunday School and a member of one of the leading families of Pittsfield, was begun to-day.

Conklin wants damages of $25,000 for an assault alleged to have been committed by Whittlesy, in which plaintiff's collar bone was broken.

Whittlesy admitted in court to-day he struck the first blow, but says Conklin's bone was broken in a later altercation, when he was obliged to defend himself from an attack with a shovel.

MORE CRIMES LAID TO LEE

Previous to the arraignment in court to-day of James A. Lee, the police said the man had confessed to a number of burglaries in addition to the fourteen he had already told about.

Lee was in on a Medford job, the police say, but managed to get away. His pardner Lee, after making his confession, was taken before Wilson in the East Cambridge House of Correction, where he repeated his confession, implicating Wilson.

Beyond admitting that he knew Lee and had lived in the same house with him, Wilson denied everything.

IVES SENTENCED FOR SHOOTING MRS. AUTY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 14.—Edward H. Ives, who shot and dangerously wounded Mrs. Julia A. F. C. Auty, has been sentenced to four and one-half years' imprisonment. Mrs. Auty is paralyzed in the lower part of her body. It is claimed that Ives had been very attentive to her, but she did not accept his attentions.

DASH INTO SMOKE; SAVED 3 FROM DEATH

Guided by faint moans of suffering, three young Charlestown men groped through a house filled with smoke and rescued the three little children of Mr. and Mrs. John Mahoney, at their home, No. 21 Concord street. The frantic mother was overcome with emotion when her precious, safe and sound, were placed in her arms.

The three heroes were Edward O'Sullivan, No. 36 Concord street; Charles J. Smith, No. 41 Maple street, and T. J. Tibbitts, No. 34 Monument street. They were walking along Concord street early in the evening when they saw a sheet of flame burst from a window in the attic of the Mahoney home. They rushed into the house to give the alarm and the mother cried to them that her three children were on that floor. Without a moment's hesitation the young men ran up the stairs and broke into the room. The smoke was so dense that they could not see. The moans guided them. The children were almost overcome. Their clothing was scorched.

The children were Nell, aged two; Daniel, three, and Ella, five. They had been put to bed by their mother, who left a light burning in the room to reassure the little ones until they should fall asleep. One of them attempted to get out of bed and in doing so upset the lamp and set fire to the bedclothes. The fire loss was nominal.

31 DEER A DAY'S KILL IN MAINE

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 14.—The game receipts were thirty one deer. The only Boston man to pass through was W. F. Lawton, who came down from Moosehead Lake with two fine bucks.

J. A. Donnelley, of Fall River, and E. S. Nichols, of Peabody, had two deer each on the same train.

Of the Maine hunters, a party from Belfast, H. H. Gray, E. R. Estabrook, E. E. Burgess and H. N. Colcord and A. Willis, brought one deer each. A. F. Merrill, of Skowhegan; J. M. Taylor, of Cape Elizabeth; A. A. Briggs, of Foxcroft, and F. Pierce, of Augusta; H. S. Draper, of Portland, had deer, and four were tagged to Ranger men. The total receipts to date reaches 324 deer.

DYING, AN INFIDEL BECOMES A CHRISTIAN

PITTSFIELD Oct. 14.—It has been learned that Grove Hurlbut, an eccentric character, who died on Monday and who left $100,000, and supposedly an infidel, professed Christianity just before death.

During his last days he sent for the Rev. Dr. W. W. Jarvis to come and read the Bible to him, and a few hours before passing away expressed his belief in God and immortality. Hurlbut was the David Harum of the Berkshires.

MRS. PAGET'S BROKEN LEG WILL NOT HEAL

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Arthur Paget, after lying for two and one-half months flat and strapped on to a board, has made no progress as regards the union of her broken leg. It is now a question of a more serious operation on the thigh.

Important to Consumers of Gas

Right Way Proper Adjustment — Wrong Way Improper Adjustment

Consumers often claim that poor light, the flaring of burners on lighting fixtures and red and smoky flame on gas appliances are due to poor quality of gas. Such troubles are local and are due wholly to mechanical defects in piping or fixtures or improper adjustment, and, as a rule, are easily remedied.

The undersigned companies are supplying gas of the highest quality, and it is their desire that consumers shall obtain the best results from its use. If your fixtures give poor light or your gas appliances unsatisfactory service, please notify the Gas Company and a special inspector will be sent without charge to remedy such troubles.

BILL TO SAVE MRS. ROGERS FROM GALLOWS

Public Hearing Will Be Held On Measure to Commute Her Death Sentence.

ASKS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 14.—The bill introduced in the Vermont House of Representatives to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence of Mrs. Mary Rogers, of Bennington, will probably be reported back to the House after a public hearing.

A bill to abolish capital punishment has been introduced in the House by Mr. Miller, of Barnard. The bill provides life imprisonment for murder in the first degree, that when a person is convicted of this crime he is legally dead, his estate may be settled and his wife may remarry.

Chaplain Farnum of the State Senate was obliged to-day to submit to a delicate operation and his condition is now critical. Chaplain Farnum is not only blind himself, but has an aged mother who is totally blind, and a father a helpless invalid, both of whom are entirely dependent upon his earnings. Arrangements have been made to supply his place in the Senate without loss of salary to him.

The Democrats in the House held a caucus this evening to nominate a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Redfield Proctor. The election comes next Tuesday. It was unanimously voted to nominate John H. Senter, of this city. Senator Proctor will be re-elected for six years, but Mr. Senter will poll the solid Democratic vote. Senator Proctor is now seventy-six years old, so if he lives out another term he will be eighty-two at its close.

BELT'S FIANCEE GETS INSURANCE

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 14.—Miss Amelia Dumas, whom Dr. Edward J. Belt attempted to slay before he shot two friends and killed himself, will receive the $1,000 insurance on his life in the Knights of Pythias. Springfield lodge having decided that his suicide does not render void the insurance. It will also pay $150 funeral expenses.

Dr. Benjamin Jackson, one of Belt's victims, has been discharged from Mercy Hospital.

ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION OF WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS AT BROCKTON NOTIFICATION DELIGHTS PARTY LEADERS

Photographed Expressly for the Boston American by a Staff Photographer.

SCENES ATTENDING NOTIFICATION CEREMONIES OF WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS AT BROCKTON.

SEE SUCCESS IN CHOICE OF PEOPLE'S MAN

The ceremony of notifying the Democratic candidates of the State ticket of their nomination was a complete success.

The enthusiasm manifested by the big audience, which completely filled the City Theatre at Brockton, was a guarantee that an immense majority will be given to the ticket by Brockton and the surrounding communities, in whose esteem no man is higher than the Democratic standard-bearer, William L. Douglas.

Given Inspiring Reception.

The reception accorded Mr. Douglas as he stepped out to respond to the notification speech of Congressman Thayer was inspiring, and the leaders of the party from other places were immensely gratified by it, for it afforded proof that here was a man of the people, if ever a candidate for public office was.

Not less gratifying was the applause which marked the points made by Mr. Douglas in his speech, for it proved that the audience was highly representative of the people of the State, quick to discern and appreciate, and that the whole political and economic situation was thoroughly understood by the candidate.

The notification was a great event for Brockton. It was the first proceeding of the kind in the political history of the State, but it is certain that it will not be the last conducted under Democratic auspices.

It was a fine opening of the campaign, for it demonstrated that the people are alive to the issues with which they must justify their ballots, and an indication that the vote will be big in all the industrial centres.

Prolonged Cheering at End.

The cheering upon the conclusion of Mr. Douglas's speech was prolonged, and it was plain to the observer that every person in the theatre would go forth as a missionary in his cause.

The response for the other candidates on the ticket was made by John C. Crosby, of Pittsfield, the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Crosby said in part:

"The Republican party of Massachusetts, realizing that it cannot much longer deny to the people the adoption of more liberal trade conditions with our northern neighbors, has inserted in its State platform this year a plank advocating a sort of qualified reciprocity. Yet in this the whole party is sincere. Insincerity has been the record of the party for years past, and it cannot be depended upon longer.

"Eldest Roosevelt himself was never a high protectionist until he became a candidate for the Vice-Presidency."

Crosby Praises Douglas.

Of Mr. Douglas, Mr. Crosby said:

"His candidacy appeals to all our citizens. He will receive the support of the business men, he is the favorite of the laboring man, and of all other classes who desire an honest, economical and competent administration of the affairs of this Commonwealth. All is well known enough in public and private life to show his ability, his integrity, his self-reliance, his strength of will."

SULLIVAN SAYS RECIPROCITY WILL AID FOSS

The questions asked in a recent address by Eugene N. Foss, Republican candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District, were taken up and answered by Congressman John A. Sullivan in a speech before the Owl Club at Roxbury. Congressman Sullivan said that the questions were asked merely for partisan purposes, and not because Mr. Foss had any doubt of his stand in favor of reciprocity legislation.

Mr. Sullivan said:

Congressman John A. Sullivan spoke in part as follows:

"I believe my opponent (Eugene N. Foss) is sincere in his advocacy of reciprocity, and have never said otherwise, and I am confident the public will believe I am equally sincere in my desire to advance Massachusetts interests by bringing the United States and Canada into closer trade relations. And I think the public will believe my action is wholly disinterested, while it is well known that my opponent would make large financial gains by obtaining through reciprocity the cheaper coal and iron of Canada, which he would use in his business.

"It is hardly becoming in him (my opponent) to criticise the sincerity of those who were laboring in the vineyard much earlier than himself.

"The national Democratic platform pronounces squarely for reciprocity with Canada, while the national Republican platform favors only such reciprocity as will not injure 'any and every one American industry; that is, it favors reciprocity with non-competing products only. Therefore the Republican platform is opposed to the only kind of reciprocity which it is possible to have with Canada.

"Mr. Foss's position favoring the admission of Canada's farm products free of duty would not, in my opinion, get a single Republican vote in the United States Senate, let alone the necessary two-thirds.

"So if Mr. Foss wants company he would better come over to us, for he will find it lonesome on his side. He will be more comfortable, for he will find us united in favor of reciprocity while, as he knows, there is an irreconcilable conflict on his side. Reciprocity with Canada may be a 'good enough Morgan' for the Massachusetts Republicans in this Presidential election, but if he would abide in peace with his low tariff and reciprocity brethren, his place is in our camp."

DRAPER SAYS G.O.P. PLATFORM IS A STRADDLE

Downright dissatisfaction with the Republican State platform, which he characterized as a menace to the principle of protection, was expressed by General William F. Draper, of Hopedale, in an address before the officers of the Home Market Club at the Hotel Westminster. He believes it an attempt at a straddle which will ultimately bring disaster upon the party.

General Draper said:

"Since receiving the call for this meeting I have carefully studied the platform of our recent State convention, and considered the circumstances of its preparation and adoption. Of course it is an attempt at a straddle upon an important issue—showing a desire to retain the support of both sides. Of course it is, so far as it indicates anything, a yielding to those who believe in reciprocity regardless of protection.

Dissects Platform.

"Both of these facts are legitimate cause for regret. Protectionists must regret that there has been a concession on a matter of principle; and straightforward men of any belief must regret that the committee had not the courage to make a square statement of views, one way or the other.

Let us examine the platform. It states, firstly:

"We indorse the entire platform of the Republican National Convention at Chicago."

This indorsement includes the reciprocity plank, as follows:

"We have extended widely our foreign markets, and we believe in the adoption of all practicable methods for their further extension, including commercial reciprocity wherever reciprocal arrangements can be effected consistent with the principles of protection, and without injury to American agriculture, American labor or any American industry.

"Further Measures."

"It then goes on to say in another plank:

"We also believe that still further measures should be taken toward negotiating reciprocity treaties with foreign countries, and especially with Canada and Newfoundland, upon such terms and conditions as will secure an enlargement of our foreign trade, for the common benefit of our people, wherever reciprocal arrangements can be effected consistently with the principles of protection and without injury to American industries, or which, as President Roosevelt said in his message of 1902, the 'minimum of damage done may be disregarded for the sake of the maximum of good accomplished.

"Now, which of these two planks is the one that reminds the party? It seems to me that neither one commits it, since the other is present, and that the performance, as a whole, cannot be a satisfactory one to thinking men—even to those who are responsible for it.

"Some of us believe in something on one side or the other of this question, and if the Republican party believes in neither side it would have been wiser to say nothing than to make contradictory expressions."

HILL DECLARES AGAINST RULE BY INJUNCTION

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 14.—A straightforward condemnation of "government by injunction" and a demand for a jury trial for every person held in contempt by a federal judge were made by David B. Hill in his campaign speech here. The argument is a new one in this campaign, and was greeted with thunderous applause by an immense audience.

"A man has a right to quit work where and when he pleases," said Mr. Hill. "The position of the Democratic party upon this subject is right, and if the Democratic candidates are elected 'government by injunction' will no longer exist."

LODGE OUT TO DEFEAT FOSS?

Anti-Reciprocity Literature Is Being Sent Out Bearing Senator's Frank.

Much to the mystification of the friends of Eugene N. Foss, Republican candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District, anti-reciprocity campaign literature is being received by voters in the district in envelopes bearing the mailing frank of Senator Lodge. Mr. Foss has had information of this, but is not ready to discuss it.

His friends consider it a direct attack on Mr. Foss's candidacy, for the matter consists of extracts from a speech of Congressman Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, who is among the highest of the high protectionists, in opposition to the policy of reciprocity which Senator Lodge is making but non-competitive products.

This is exactly what Mr. Foss has been fighting against, and in his speeches he has criticised Mr. Dalzell's position freely.

Mr. Foss would have coal, lumber and other products of both countries admitted duty free from Canada, for the benefit of Massachusetts and its industries.

Now the Foss men are asking: "Does Senator Lodge hope for the defeat of Mr. Foss, and is he trying to accomplish it?"

SCHLEY AT LAST TELLS HIS STORY

His "Forty-five Years Under the Flag" Sheds Light on Santiago Campaign.

HOW HE WAS WRONGED

BY H. E. MACNICHOL.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY has at last told his own story of the Santiago campaign and the great naval battle of Santiago. If you are interested in one of the most brilliant achievements of American arms which marked a new era in the history of all the western world, you should read this book, entitled "Forty-five Years Under the Flag," just published by D. Appleton & Co.

It is a work that will interest every one, from the sixteen-year-old newsboy who is studying history and loves tales of stirring adventure to the grandsire whose blood still pulses hotly with patriotic pride at the recounting of valiant deeds of arms under our starry flag.

It is more than a mere account of the Santiago campaign. It recounts all the varied service of one who served his country through two wars and in all parts of the globe, from far away Japan and China to West Affica, from beyond the Arctic circle to far southern Cape Horn.

After reading his book the impression will come to most of us that Admiral Schley has been too modest in setting forth his own personal services; he is full of praise throughout every chapter for the work of his brother officers and the men who served under him.

In the chapters devoted to the battle of Santiago he does not say that he won the fight, or that the credit for that victory should have gone to him—he contents himself with a presentation of the pertinent facts in the case, which should convince every one but the most prejudiced reader that Schley deserves better of his country than the treatment he has received from the Navy Department under the late Secretary, John D. Long.

Gets Rights at Last.

It is encouraging to those of us who still hold faith in the ultimate triumph of right over falsehood, abuse and unwarranted persecution, to learn that since Mr. Long's retirement from the Cabinet, there has been at least some small change, and that records hitherto inaccessible to Admiral Schley have been placed at his disposal, and that permission has been granted him to publish his Memoirs, incorporating therein facts in his own defense which were barred out from consideration by the Court of Inquiry convened by Secretary Long.

Admiral Schley does not devote much space to Mr. Long, but he does characterize his whole attitude as unfair, unjust and breathing of the same spirit which characterized the unfathomable attacks of a small official clique.

To the three or four envious brother officers, who inspired the whole unjust, vicious Sampson-Schley controversy, he pays his respects in the statement of a few good thing for them that he did not know in those trying days of the months following the outbreak of the war with Spain, that these officers had withheld from him important information, of which they were then in possession, as testified to by their three years later before the Court of Inquiry.

Schley does not mention their names, but everyone in the navy knows to whom they are. They are all rear admirals on the active list to-day, and have been signally honored by the administration, which tried to ruin Schley's professional reputation.

Avoids Adding Fuel.

This book will neither revive nor continue the Schley-Sampson controversy. Apparently Admiral Schley, in writing it has had in mind this very thing—to avoid heaping fresh fuel on the fire of controversy, for these chapters contain very little comment and are as straightaway a presentation of known facts as a lawyer's brief or a judge's impartial review of a case before making his charge to the jury.

Of the chapters regarding the Santiago campaign it may be said that they are colorless, the other chapters of the book are brighter in tone, full of accounts of thrilling adventure and most entertaining.

Admiral Schley tells of his boyhood days among the blue hills of Maryland, how Bartlett Fritchie, later made famous by Whittier's poem, gave him cookies and other sweets; of how through the influence of General Winfield Scott, the Mexican war hero, who was his godfather and after whom he was named, he secured an appointment to the naval academy. There are interesting accounts of his cadet career and his dual graduation, followed by a cruise to China.

Arrives in Boston.

Coming back to the United States, he arrived in Boston Harbor just at the time when the whole country was rent with the first staggering blows of the Civil war. Schley was a Southerner; already a Massachusetts regiment had been fired upon by the people of his native State, Maryland.

But Schley did not falter in his loyalty, and one of the most inspiring chapters in his remarkable book tells how, down in the Captain's cabin of the old sloop-of-war, in Boston Harbor, he held up his right hand and took anew the oath of allegiance to the flag, whose stars and stripes he could see waving in the breeze through the skylight over his head.

There followed years of strenuous service, in scores of battles, on the Southern and Gulf Coasts and up the Mississippi, where he served under Porter and Farragut. When the war was over, he became cruises to Mexico, to the Isthmus of Panama, to Europe, to China and Japan, and around through the Straits of Magellan to the South Pacific.

Experiences Are Thrilling.

Out in Korea, Schley was adjutant of the American naval force which landed, assaulted and captured the river forts above Chemulpo, to avenge an outrage on the officers and crew of an American merchant ship. He cruised up the great rivers of China and through the South Seas.

He went out in command of the corvette Essex in a cruise along the West Coast of Africa, and visited Cape Town, crossing the southern ocean to Argentine Republic, Uruguay and Brazil.

Because of his high professional attainments, he was specially chosen by the President of the United States to command the expedition of three ships sent out by Congress to seek the missing members of the Lady Franklin Bay expedition, and after weeks of battling against ice-bergs, ice floes and the other unfathomable perils of those far-away Arctic seas, succeeded in rescuing Lieutenant Greely and his party, all that were left alive. In forty-eight hours more all would have been dead.

Three Years in Boston.

During his periods of shore duty, he served three years as lighthouse inspector in Boston, where his children were educated; as lighthouse board member in New York; as Chief of the Bureau of Equipment of the Navy Department in Washington; as secretary of the Lighthouse Board, and later as Chairman of the Lighthouse Board in Washington.

He commanded the cruiser Baltimore when she was flagship of the home station; had the honor of conveying President Harrison to Boston on that ship during the G. A. R. encampment of 1890, and later with the same ship carried the remains of John Ericsson, the inventor of the monitor, to Sweden. On this cruise he visited Norway, Germany, Spanish, Portuguese, Spanish, Italian and French ports, and entertained on board the Kings of nearly all these countries.

The Baltimore then went to Valparaiso, Chili, to protect American interests. Some

FATHER SELLS BABY FOR CENT; MOTHER SPURNS $1,000,000

Declares She Did Not Know What She Was Doing When She Put Her Mark to Deed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—"Judge, this woman stole my baby and she is trying to keep my husband from living with me," was the reply made by Mrs. Frances Bell

ROSE GWENDOLYN BELL, SOLD FOR A CENT.
This baby's mother says she would not sell her for a million dollars, protesting that she signed the deed for her sale in ignorance of what she was doing.

PART with my little girl for one penny? No! Not for a million dollars ewan. I thought I was signing a paper of an entirely different nature when I affixed my mark to the bill of sale upon which an effort was made to take little Rose away from me.—MRS. THOMAS BELL.

in First Criminal Court, of Jersey City, yesterday to a charge of disorderly conduct made by her sister-in-law, Mrs. John McDermott.

Mrs. McDermott accused Mrs. Bell of going to her home, at No. 332 Tenth street, and calling her names. Mrs. Bell said that she had only wished to get possession of her baby, which had been unlawfully taken from her.

To substantiate her claim to the child, Mrs. McDermott produced a bill of sale, whereby the father, Thomas Bell, had agreed to relinquish all claims to the child for the consideration of one cent, and binding himself to pay the burial expenses if the child died within two months.

Mother Wins Baby.

Judge Higgins at once dismissed the charge and offered sympathy to the mother, who went joyfully from the courtroom with her twelve-months'-old baby in her arms.

"Part with my little girl for one penny? No. Not for a million dollars ewan," she claimed Mrs. Bell at her home, No. 117 Tenth street, yesterday.

"I have several fourteen children," she said, "and this is my fifteenth."

"I don't know how to read or write, and when I was asked to sign the paper I didn't know that I was signing away my baby for one cent. I permitted my husband to bring the child to Jersey City from New York, where we were then living, because he said a change of air for a few days would be good for it. I let it stay with his sister until we moved over here.

Demanded Its Return.

"When I learned that my baby was being held on a bill of sale I demanded its return and was arrested."

Thomas Bell, who had heard the statement made by his wife, admitted that she was correct.

"I was forced to sell the baby, and wrote the bill of sale when I was drunk," he said. "Do you think a sober man would sell a child like that for a penny?"

Mrs. John McDermott declared that her brother had given her the consent of his own free will and that she took the child thinking she could give it better care than the mother, who had fourteen others.

WOMEN WILL RAISE $40,000

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 14.—At the closing session of the New England branch of the Methodist Women's Foreign Missionary society the branch voted to raise $40,000 the coming year for the cause. There was considerable discussion as to whether the figure should be $38,000, as last year, or $40,000, in accordance with the suggestion of Miss Bell, the corresponding secretary.

It was also voted to establish a birthday fund for missionary work, wherein 365 women in New England pledge themselves to give $2 to the fund on their birthday. A gift of $1,000 from a New Haven man, whose name is withheld, was announced.

One-Cent Contract For Sale of Baby.

I, THOMAS BELL, do resign all claim to my baby daughter, Rose Gwendolyn Bell, on condition that said baby be taken care of, and in consideration of which I resign all claims to said Rose Gwendolyn Bell in favor of John and Rose McDermott, for the sum of one cent; and, if said baby should die inside of two months, I, Thomas Bell, will be responsible for her burial; and I resign all claims after the 7th day of December, 1904.

PASADENA TO ENTER DERBY

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Jimmie McLaughlin says that he several times offered Pasadena, the winner of the Nursery Handicap, at sale for $6,000, but no one seemed to want him.

"I'm glad now," he remarked after the Ben Strome colt's victory, "that other folks underestimated him. I'll keep him myself, and he will, I think, win the Consolation at Bennings this Fall. Will Misc and Phil seldom seem to me to be his most formidable opponents, and he ought to beat them.

"Pasadena was really cut out for a good horse, and he should have won a good race before the Nursery. He had a lot of hard luck in the Summer with scratches and accidents. After Bennings I am going to take him to California. I'll put him in the Derby and other Pacific Slope races for three-year-olds and three-year-olds and over, and I strongly suspect that he will win one or two big stakes before next Spring."

MAINE WRECK BEING PROBED

LEWISTON, Me., Oct. 14.—A hearing was held to ascertain how the switch was left open that caused the recent railroad accident in this city when five lives were lost.

It was established that a split switch leading to the west siding had been left open and that the train ran upon the siding at a speed estimated at from forty to sixty miles an hour, until it reached a second or stub switch, when it left the rails.

Thomas I. Breckenridge, of Waterville, was the last man to throw open the switch. He said he took pains to see that both switches were set and locked before he left them.

Albert T. Jellison, foreman, testified that he was at the wreck a few minutes after it occurred. He found the switch open for the side line, and swung it up to the main line and locked it and spiked it.

POOLROOM IN BOOKSHOP; PROPRIETOR FINED $900

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 14.—John A. McKee, a well-known bookseller, has pleaded guilty to keeping a poolroom, and was sentenced to jail for two months and fined $150 on each of six counts. The poolroom was raided by the State police, after the local police had spent months trying to secure evidence.

TRIED TO GIVE BABIES AWAY AT WAREHOUSE

A Misspelled Advertisement Causes Odd Mistakes and Much Trouble.

HARD TO FIND RIGHT ONE

Owing to a misspelled advertisement of a "Baby Wanted," several dozen babies were hopefully lugged out to a wool warehouse on Summer street extension. Another unfortunate result is that Mrs. Mary Monahan, of No. 262 Summer street, East Boston, doesn't know the baby boy yet whom she wants to adopt.

So many people called at the wool warehouse on the first afternoon that, when Mrs. Monahan spied the mistake in spelling and had it corrected, the baby supply was evidently discouraged. Mrs. Monahan had had only five applicants so far, and none of them suited, on account of being girls, or for other reasons.

Trouble on Summer Street.

There was a fearful and wonderful time, though, along Summer street extension when the people with babies to let, loan, give away, or swap, came along. Although babies were not wanted in the wool house, the baby carriers kept coming. They asked people up and down the street where No. 262 was, till the neighborhood thought a baby show was in the air and started to groom their own for entry. When the baby guardians found that no babies were wanted they concluded it was a mean joke and departed in wrath.

Meanwhile Mrs. Monahan, with her advertisement correctly spelled, waits for the right baby.

She received a reporter from the BOSTON AMERICAN with a smile to-day.

"I'm not baby, and how old is he?" were the first questions she asked. Before she could be explained that the editor's object was not to sell a baby, she confessed that she only wanted her babies, and that little girl babies, no matter how pretty, would not do.

Hard to Find Baby.

"Yes, I am having a hard time to find a baby," continued she, "and I think I will take my ad out of the papers. Only five persons have been here who want to let me have their babies. One man came from Worcester, but his baby was a girl, and she wouldn't do. There's a nice boy baby three months old up at the Homeopathic Hospital that has been written me about, and maybe I will take him.

"You see, I have a little girl, three years old, but I haven't my boy. I want a boy baby, and I want to have him to keep forever. I am going to move away to Maine soon and I want the baby on a farm to grow up there and give him the best of care and treat him just as I would my own."

TIRED SOLDIER TRIES TO DIE

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 14.—Life at Fort Adams is —— I can't stand it," said Private George Wilson, twenty-two years old, of the seventy-eighth Company, Coast Artillery, who enlisted from Kentucky six months ago, at retreat last Sunday after-noon. "I'm going to clean my gun for the last time, too."

In the meantime Runyan had made a rear entrance to the barracks, fled to the trigger of his gun and around his foot, and tried to commit suicide, but instead the cartridge struck the muscle of his arm. He is almost completely off. Runyan is alive, but little else at the moment is promising. An attempt has been made to keep the matter quiet.

SHOT TAME DEER WAS FINED $200

Special to the Boston American.

BYFIELD, Oct. 14.—It is said that a prominent citizen of this town had to stay in a Nova Scotia jail while a townsman was fined $200 for shooting with his automatic rifle, returned home and raised the money to pay a $200 fine imposed for shooting a tame deer. The two Byfield sports then went into the woods without a guide and each killed a deer.

It fell at the first shot, and then the hunters separated in a hurry. When the unhappy American was fined $200 it was found the funds of both did not equal that amount.

CHURCH TO HAVE 5 MILES STONE

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Oct. 14.—More than $500,000 will be paid for the stone to be used in the First Church of Christ Scientist building to be erected in Boston. The Webb Granite and Construction Co., of this city, has obtained the contract for supplying the stone, which will amount to more than 150,000 cubic feet, or enough to make a column two feet at the base which would rise five miles in the air.

Tennessee marble will be the material for the main and side entrances, and Bedford, Ind., limestone will be the principal stone used above the granite foundation. The latter will be twenty feet high. Christian Scientists say the new church will be the finest and most costly house of worship in the United States.

BRITAIN FEARS U. S. RIVALRY

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Sir Andrew Noble, head of the famous firm of Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., at Newcastle-on-Tyne, in a speech at the annual meeting of the stockholders said that although England was still ahead of all nations in shipbuilding, other powers were rapidly approaching the same perfection, especially America, which during recent years has built so many warships for foreign powers, as well as for herself, that it dominates the night at any time becomes a dangerous rival.

"There are," Sir Noble said, "great difficulties ahead for us, especially as the steel industry of England is in a very poor condition, while the importation of foreign steel from America has nearly doubled. This is a time when English employers and employees must stand together or fall together."

BRAVE BEVERLY NURSE DECORATED BY MIKADO

MISS M. E. GLADWIN

BEVERLY NURSE, DECORATED BY MIKADO.

Miss Mary E. Gladwin on Her Way Home After Performing Heroic Service in the Far East.

Bearing the special decoration of the Mikado, which "the Emperor conferred upon all of the American Red Cross nurses for services on the field of battle in the Far East, Miss Mary E. Gladwin, formerly the matron of the Beverly Hospital, is at San Francisco on her way home from the West.

It is believed that the fearful strain to which the nurses have been subjected in the fiercely fought conflicts was too much for the young woman's strength. At the Beverly Hospital it was said that Miss Gladwin would probably return there.

PHYSICIANS CONQUERING LUNG DISEASES

Dr. Miller, of Worcester, Says Death Rate From Pulmonary Ills Is Decreasing.

"CONSUMPTION CURABLE"

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Oct. 14.—Dr. L. C. MILLER, one of the highest authorities on pulmonary diseases, in a paper read before the Worcester District Medical Society, declared that the death rate from this trouble is very small in comparison with the number of persons affected, and entreated the members of the profession to shake themselves free of the idea that tuberculosis is incurable.

The doctor said that the death rate from consumption in this country is decreasing.

How Disease is Cured.

"If we remember," he said, "that many have gotten well without any care, indeed without their disease being recognized, may we not expect to save many more with care. Many cases if treated thus early may be cured without much interruption of their occupation by regulation of the routine of their life, correction of faults of digestion, better feeding, more air in the workshop or office and homes; dropping off some unessential work or pleasure, more rest in bed at night and a short vacation now and then.

"The cure of pulmonary tuberculosis depends upon good air, good food and good medical supervision; that is, a good doctor might express the question mathematically thus: Good climate, good food, good doctor, the best results possible; or good climate, good food, good doctor, a lesser result; or good climate, good food, good doctor, a still lesser result, and so on varying the terms of the equation.

"We must shake ourselves free of the old idea of the incurability of the disease and resolutely take it in hand at the earliest manifestations. Not wait until the whole composite of symptoms is complete and the patient's strength and money all gone, and then consign him to some impossible climate or mode of life.

Treatment for Early Cases.

"These early cases are the ones for whom I strongly urge the home treatment. Here in Worcester county we are well situated to carry it out.

"There is no part of the State except the Berkshire region, where there are few large towns, that offers so good natural vantages for the treatment of consumption as this county, and no large city so many as Worcester. I know of many who have come from the coast to this city on account of the benefits they receive here in certain respiratory troubles.

"Within the city are many localities of 500, 600, 700 and even 1,000 feet above sea level. I have seen remarkable improvement follow the removal from the lowland near Piedmont street to Richmond Heights at Tatnuck.

Gets Well at Home.

"I have a patient commanding the advantages of an adequate home, who invariably gets rid of his cough if he goes to his father's country place in Hubbardston. Leicester, Spencer, Paxton, Rutland, Barre, Petersham, Hubbardston, Templeton, Gardner, Princeton all are at an elevation of nearly 1,000 feet above sea level, while Sterling, Clinton, Lancaster, Harvard, Ayer, though not so high, have the advantages of a pinus forest.

"Boylston, Shrewsbury, Grafton, Auburn, Northbridge, Webster, Sturbridge and Southbridge and the Brookfields, while again not so high, have still the rolling hills which contribute so much to the circulation and purity of the air.

"We have, then, a good deal of climate which should be utilized to its fullest extent."

MANY ROYAL ENGAGEMENTS

Special Cable to Boston American.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—There seems to be a regular epidemic of engagements in royal circles. Hardly had the German Crown Prince become engaged to Duchess Cecilie when his example was followed by King Alphonso of Spain, although this engagement has not yet been made public. Now comes from Madrid word that the Infanta Marie Theresia, sister of the young King, has become engaged to Prince Ferdinand Maria of Bavaria, the oldest son of Prince Ludwig Ferdinand. The engagement of King Alphonso and his sister will then undoubtedly be made public at the same time. Marie Theresia was born on Nov. 12, 1882, while Prince Ferdinand is two years her junior, being born in 1884. He father is married to Infanta Marie De La Paz.

COTTON CORNER CAUSES FAILURE

Special Cable to Boston American.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—The bankruptcy of the American speculators of the cotton supply of the world has resulted in the bankruptcy of the greatest cotton firm in Austria, Taussig & Co. This failure will mean the downfall of scores of other cotton firms all over the empire. The head of the firm, Victor Taussig, was so crushed by the misfortunes which had overtaken him that he committed suicide, while his brother, who, after getting together all the money which he could lay his hand on, about 700,000 crowns, is said to have boarded a steamer now on its way to New York.

The liabilities of the firm are said to amount to considerably more than five millions.

MAY FORTIFY PEAK'S ISLAND

Special to the Boston American.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 14.—It is believed here that one of the results of the war game played by United States warships of this sort will be the fortification of the ocean side of Peak's Island. This island is in Portland harbor, and one of the most popular Summer resorts on the Maine coast.

War Department engineers have been making surveys there and obtaining the names of the property owners. It is said the War Department took up the fortification question after the landing of marines on Long Island proved forts could not train guns on a cruiser entering the harbor through Hussey's Sound.

Refused Life Insurance Because He Had Bright's Disease

Mr. William F. Montgomery, Coal Dealer of Albany, N. Y., Was Refused Life Insurance, on Account of Having Bright's Disease, but After He Was Cured by Warner's Safe Cure the Company Accepted Him, and He Now Has His Policy.

If you have any symptoms of kidney disease, or if any member of your family in this or past generations has had it (for it's hereditary), write the Medical Department, Warner's Safe Cure Company, Rochester, N. Y., for symptom blank, interesting medical booklet and doctor's free advice. Do it today, while you think of it. Delays are dangerous.

Mr. Montgomery's Eloquent Letter.

"I enjoyed vigorous health up to a year ago, when overwork seemed to undermine my constitution. I paid little attention to the matter until it was brought home to me forcibly when I was examined for life insurance. The company refused me a policy. I was so surprised I went at once to the company's doctor to find out the reason. Imagine my horror when he told me I had Bright's disease. Complications of the stomach set in, and although I doctored with well-known specialists, my strength diminished and I grew rapidly worse.

"Interested friends brought Warner's Safe Cure to my attention, and told of perfectly wonderful cures they knew of among their acquaintances. I decided to despair. I procured the first bottle. After a few days there were some encouraging indications. The slight improvement noted continued, and I gained rapidly in strength and health. I was again insured by the same insurance company and I was a splendid risk and gladly gave me a policy. Today I am in perfect condition and even a touch of Kidney trouble would not affect my health and life to Warner's Safe Cure."—55 Hamilton Street, Albany, N. Y. August 10, 1904.

MR. WM. F. MONTGOMERY.

Cured by Warner's Safe Cure

Warner's Safe Cure has been used by leading doctors, and prescribed by their practice, and sold by druggists everywhere for over 30 years, as the one certain cure for all diseases of kidneys, liver, bladder and blood. It cures when all else fails, and leaves no bad after effects. 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by druggists, or may be had direct from the proprietors.

TEST YOUR URINE by pouring a reddish-brown sediment forms, your kidneys have been diseased for months, and your only hope of life and health is to at once take Warner's Safe Cure to check inflammation, drive out the poisonous waste matters that have accumulated, and to tone up and cure the kidneys so that they can perform their work naturally and healthfully.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS. They are worthless and often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it, and it only, will cure you.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

CARTOONIST TAD SKETCHES M'GOVERN, WHO PROMISES TO BE THE SAME OLD TERRIBLE TERRY AGAIN

AS HANLON HUNG IN HIS OWN CORNER WEAK AND HELPLESS JUST AS THE POLICE STOPPED THE FIGHT.

AFTER BEING DOWN NINE SECONDS TERRY GOT UP AND IN A MIX UP LANDED A TERRIFIC LEFT ON HANLONS STOMACH. AFTER THAT EDDIE COLLAPSED.

M'GOVERN IS "TERRIBLE TERRY" AGAIN

BY TAD.

The recent McGovern-Hanlon fight is the all-absorbing topic of conversation among fight fans. Some think Terry made a great fight because Eddie has gone back slightly on account of the hard battles he has fought lately. Others think the rest McGovern took put him back in his old form of three years ago and say that he will go through the bunch as he did then without a break.

Terry's Wonderful Record.

McGovern certainly did show wonderful speed and form. He is a marvel without a doubt. Just look back at the men he fought who were in their prime at that time and see where they are now. George Dixon, Frank Erne, Eddie Santry, Oscar Gardner, Pedlar Palmer, all forgotten. Retired from the ring and rushed on his knees. Here is McGovern, the same Terry that beat those men, and going through the new crop as he did years ago. There must be something back of it. Terry led a model life, drinking and smoking were not on his bill of fare and the cafes never saw him in the wee hours of the morning. Other champions could not resist the good fellows, shake the bright lights, the big perfect and the highball. Where are they? What?

McGovern Dumfounded Spectators.

Those who saw Terry latter Hanlon bout a helpless state Monday night, met them dumfounded at the manner in which he fought. From the tap of the gong he gave his opponent no rest, and from then on Eddie moment until the police jumped in and stopped the fight.

Terry made a target of Hanlon's body, and fought for that spot alone. He would occasionally switch one over to the jaw, but, seeing that they took no effect, he went back to the body, where the punishment is bound to tell sooner or later.

Hanlon's blows, while seemingly swift and snappy, had no force behind them, save his left hook. This was the blow that dropped Terry in the fourth, and the one that always got him whenever Eddie landed it. Had he kept using this hook instead of fighting Terry to the body as he did, there might have been another tale to tell. He staggered McGovern, lifted him off his feet and even sent him reeling to the ropes with this punch, and his admirers are wondering yet why he did not stay with the wallop that would have landed him the prize.

McGovern Smashed Eddie's Body.

McGovern's best blow was hard to make out. He just lowered his head and aimed with all the might for that spot. After he had been knocked down and got up dazed it was a left to the body that put him on an equal footing with Hanlon again and gave him the chance he enjoyed with it and battered away until Hanlon, weak from punishment, dropped his hands and fell against the post in his corner, a beaten man.

He was not counted out. Not a second had been counted on him. As one sport said in speaking of the finish, Hanlon is always knocked out standing up. Corbett bent him in this same fashion. Eddie could not hold his hands up, and Graney stopped it. With Nelson in Erbeck he went out practically the same way. He took all that was coming, but would not go down. He seems to lose all strength, but is always strong enough to stumble around.

Fastest Hanlon Ever Met.

Even though Terry did not knock Hanlon out, he did more than Young Corbett or Benny Yanger ever did. Hanlon met both these men and staged twenty rounds with them. Young Corbett, in his best condition, took sixteen rounds to stop Hanlon, and how Terry does it in four. The pace set by McGovern was the fastest Hanlon ever had, and probably hastened the end of the battle. Terry is a regular Boldface at setting the pace. We will watch him closely with Corbett.

IRWIN'S FIRST BOUT EAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Toby Irwin, the clever San Francisco lightweight, who recently came on to Philadelphia with Eddie Hanlon in the hope of getting a few matches with the topnotchers, is to make his first bow in the East to-night before the Manhattan A. C., when he will clash with Eddie Haney, of Philadelphia, six rounds at 135 pounds. Irwin, on the Pacific Coast, is considered a dangerous man at his weight.

CHAMPS WELL REPRESENTED ON OLD-TIMER'S ALL-AMERICAN TEAMS

Now that the American League race is decided and the season of 1904 is history, the most interesting topic now discussed by the fans is the question of players that would make up the best possible team that would be a representative one.

There were so many stars in the new organization that to pick out a team would arouse discussion, no matter what players were selected; but in general, those who have filled the playing season carefully, have fully made up their minds who the topnotchers in the profession are, and consequently there would only be a difference of opinion over one or two positions.

As a whole, the players this year have shone with more brilliancy than ever before since the league came into existence, and the playing standard has improved accordingly.

In general all-around excellence, no one player has shown superiority over a rival occupying a similar position, and for that reason it would only be justifiable to give place to at least two that stand so close to each other, and perhaps the most satisfactory way to settle the thing would be to let both teams have it out on the diamond for final honors.

It would be a feast for the fans equal to a world's championship series to watch two such teams as the leading players of the league would furnish, with the men selected as follows by an old-time expert for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

CATCHERS.

Sullivan, Chicago. Criger, Boston.

PITCHERS.

Chesbro, N. Y. Patten, Wash.
Donovan, Detroit. Bernhard, Cleve.
Dineen, Boston. White, Chicago.

FIRST BASEMEN.

Davis, Phila. J. Stahl, Wash.

SECOND BASEMEN.

Lajoie, Cleveland. Murphy, Phila.

THIRD BASEMEN.

Collins, Boston. Bradley, Cleve.

SHORTSTOPS.

Parent, Boston. Davis, Chicago.

LEFT FIELDERS.

Callahan, Chic. Burkett, St. Louis.

CENTER FIELDERS.

C. Stahl, Boston. F. Jones, Chicago

RIGHT FIELDERS.

Keeler, N. Y. Crawford, Detroit

It is simply impossible to pick out a combination that would meet with unanimous satisfaction of the baseball public, as everyone has his favorites and cannot be dissuaded that the men are eligible for the best that could be gotten together.

Some of the players who rank high in the estimation of the fans are likely to be slighted, but this calamity cannot be easily avoided. In naming the rightful members of an All-American team, there is bound to be some unintentional slighting, as the strong players are so evenly bunched in some cases, and where one might excel in one department of the game, he will fall short in another direction where the other player is superior.

Two Sets Alike.

Every consideration has been used in the selection of the above teams, and there is very little to choose between the two sets of players.

A liberal pick has been made in arranging the club artists, and three have the call.

No one disputes the fact that Jack Chesbro, of the Highlanders, has no peer in pitching circles for the season of 1904, and it was due greatly to his remarkable work that the New Yorks figured so prominently in the dispute over the championship.

While Jesse Tannehill is the best fielding pitcher in the Boston camp, so far as figures go Bill Dineen showed by his twirling when the flag was in danger that he was one of the wonders in the box.

"Wild Bill" Donovan, of the Tigers, has proven that he is one of the veterans that still is good for many days, as he was the mainstay of the Detroit team and was the most feared pitcher the teams had to run up against.

In the matter of catchers, Sullivan, of the White Sox, and our own Lou Criger are almost in a class by themselves. In naming a reserve, Criger could not be equalled, especially this was true in his throwing to bases, but in batting and getting around the bases Criger was hardly up to Sullivan.

Harry Davis, of the Quakers, was the hardest hitting first baseman in the league, though not accepting as many chances in the field as Candy Lachance.

Jake Stahl, who went from the Champions to the Senators, was switched to the initial bag, and at that spot has distinguished himself to the extent that several clubs are looking for his services. His batting was an essential that made him so valuable, as his fielding was below that of many others.

Napoleon Lajoie, of the Indians, is the king of second basemen, as has been often told, and there is no chance to dwell on anybody else.

Dan Murphy, of the Philadelphias, is a harder hitting batsman than Hobe Ferris, and is the slick article for a good second baseman.

Parent, of the Bostons, and George Davis, of the White Sox, come in the front when the shortstops are concerned, and the Rabbit is ahead for the honors.

In the eyes of many there never was a player of Farrell's ability in shortfield, and when he is at his best there is little doubt of the fact.

It would be base slander to consider anybody but Captain Jimmy Collins in sizing up the third baseman, as he stands head and shoulders above any other baseman in both leagues, and his ability as a leader alone would be sufficient to give him the place, but as a player there is only one man that could come anywhere near him, and that is Bradley, of the Clevelands. Bradley has pushed Collins in quality of field work, but that is about all.

When it comes to the outfield there is all kinds of trouble in grading the men, as there are numerous fielders that share the starry realm of diamondom. For instance, the men covering the left garden were particularly high-class, and the situation is decidedly embarrassing in naming the best one.

Crawford, the Detroit rightfielder, made a great record for the season in his territory, and would have it on Willie Keeler if the latter was not the old stager and the wizard that he is.

Chick Stahl has it on the other centerfielders, both in batting and fielding. Fielding Jones, captain of the White Sox, is necessarily in the running by the work he has done this season. Burkett, of Cleveland, leads them all in fielding his position, but as a batter he is only fitted to a frizzle, but as a batter he is off again, on again.

If is perhaps stretching a point in not accepting either Selbach or Dougherty for left field, but neither was considered in the same class with Burkett in the same sphere with the batting, and the two veterans that remain, Jimmie Callahan, of the Chicagos, and Jesse Burkett, of the Browns, slip in.

CLEMENT WILL RACE AGAIN

Albert Clement, the youngest driver in the Vanderbilt cup race, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given at the Cafe Martin by W. P. Jones and S. B. Bowman, the American agents of the Clement-Bayard car, which the plucky Frenchman landed in second place.

Referring to the dismissal of his protest by the race commission, Mr. Clement said that while he mourned the loss of the race by such a close margin as one minute and twenty-eight seconds, he felt that the decision of Mr. Vanderbilt and his associates could not have been altered with all circumstances considered. At any rate, Clement will come again, and perhaps he will be a participant in the January tournament on the Ormond-Daytona course. He and Paul Lacroix, who accompanied him, will sail for home next week.

RIVAL SCHOOLS IN HOT MATCH

Dorchester High and South Boston High clash in their annual football game at the Dorchester park grounds, Dorchester, to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

South Boston has won two of the series, while Dorchester has one to its credit. There will be a crowd of 300 rooters go from the Peninsula district.

The Dorchester lineup will be: L. e., Clapp; l. t., White; l. g., Seeley; c., Locke; r. g., Binda; r. t., Lewis; r. e., Rose; q. b., Horawski; l. h., Carey; r. h., Walden; f. b., Colten.

BROWNS WIN AGAIN.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 14.—Glade's masterly pitching won the game for the Browns against the Cardinals in the fourth game of the post-series for the championship of this city.

M'COY WILLING TO FACE O'BRIEN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Kid McCoy and Jack O'Brien will in all probability be matched a few days to fight for the middleweight championship. Harry Pollok, manager of McCoy, says that he will accept O'Brien's challenge to fight at the middleweight limit and that he would cover the Philadelphian's forfeit. McCoy, it is said, will be on hand when articles of agreement are signed.

Pollok said that nothing would suit McCoy better than to meet O'Brien in an extended contest, and that the boxers would have no trouble in getting a good offer, as Los Angeles and San Francisco clubs are anxious to get the match.

Pollok said that McCoy was the legitimate aspirant for the middleweight championship honors, and not Tommy Ryan, whom the Hoosier boxer has defeated three times.

WON'T RACE KEENE'S CRACK

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—It would seem as if all the efforts to get up a special race to bring Artful, Tradition, Oiseau and Sysonby together had failed and the hoped for race to practically settle the two-year-old championship has been finally abandoned because the parties controlling Tradition and Oiseau are unwilling to meet Mr. Keene's crack at any distance or any reasonable weight concession.

Ever since the Junior Champion, at Gravesend, unavailing efforts have been made to bring about a meeting to show that Sysonby's Futurity form was all wrong. At last, to meet the case, Mr. Keene proposed to set up two races, guaranteeing to run his colt, one at six furlongs, at Morris Park, giving seven pounds to any and all; the other at seven furlongs, to be run at Jamaica or Aqueduct at weight for age, but neither was accepted.

Finally as a compromise a special race was arranged for next Saturday, six and a half furlongs, weight for age, and accepted by one of the parties, with the usual result that it was definitely announced Tuesday afternoon that neither Oiseau nor Tradition was willing to run against Sysonby. Thus the unsatisfactory defeat of Tradition Tuesday should deepen the whole matter, Sysonby will be thrown out of training.

OLD MYSTIC WILL OPEN

MEDFORD, Oct. 14.—There is a lot of questioning as to the future of Mystic Park. The syndicate which purchased it last year of H. E. Willis and the Alexander estate have decided not to cut it up into house lots at present, and the city of Medford is not prepared to take a strip of it for the purpose of widening Main street, although the improvement is needed. They have decided to extend Harvard street through. The present owners have sold all the fences surrounding it and, along the home stretch, all of the stables, sheds, grand stand and bleachers. The purchaser is fast removing the same.

The track is in good condition to hold a race over to-day. It has not washed or gullied any the past season.

There is talk of its purchase by a syndicate which will put up new stables and fences, and again there are rumors that the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association is talking of purchasing it and opening it for races.

There is a strong belief in Medford that the old racecourse is going to have another long lease of life.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

Constant Reader, Providence: Your queries are misleading and we would not care to answer them until they are explained more fully.

ATTELL LOST IN FIFTH TO SULLY

Special to the Boston American.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 14.—After fighting extremely well for four rounds, during which time he had a slight advantage over Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, Abe Attell was dropped to the floor in the fifth by a stirring punch to his wind.

Attell writhed on the boards in dreadful agony. He was doubled up in a knot and held his hands on his stomach, panting like a dog in a fit. He had a far-away look in his eye, and for a long time the fight fans thought that the mill would prove fatal.

The seconds of Attell claimed that Sully had fouled his man, and the local enthusiasts hissed the Brooklyn boy. The referee withheld his decision for about ten minutes, until the club physicians had examined Attell. The medical men declared that there were no signs which would lead them to believe that Attell had been fouled, so the arbitrator awarded the bout to Sullivan.

There was much rejoicing by the house management, as if Attell had been severely injured boxing in this city would have been given a black eye. Attell's supporters left the club declaring that it was a cleanup, now that had sent their lad to the mat, for as easy victory as Attell would get in any city.

While the fight lasted it was very interesting. Attell displayed much science, while his adversary was no slouch up to all the tricks of the game. During the first three rounds Attell easily had the better of the argument, while in the succeeding two rounds things seemed to be much in the Brooklyn boxer's favor.

GRAND CIRCUIT STARS AT MEMPHIS

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 14.—Trotting and pacing cracks are gathering here for the great meeting of the Grand Circuit. Lou Dillon, Dan Patch, Charley Mack, The Monk and Equity have arrived, and by Saturday Major Delmar, Dariel, Prince Alert, Eagle Bird, Sweet Marie and Tiverton will be at the "cotton market." The feature of the meeting next week are: Lou Dillon, 1.58½, to beat her record; Dan Patch, 1.55¼, to lower his mark; Prince Alert, 1.57, to beat his own record for hopples; Dariel, to crowd her performance of last year, 2.00¼, for pacing mares.

The new records will be tried for without the aid of dirt or wind shields.

Major Delmar will go against his own and the world's record for trotting geldings, of 2.01¾.

Charley Mac will go under the saddle to beat 2.12¾.

The Monk and Equity will be driven to beat the fast trotting team record, 2.06¼, of 2.06¾.

Tuesday, the opening day, Sweet Marie will compete in the Diamond Handicap, 2.10 class, for trotters, and will meet Ed Taylor, Hal, Fly, Jim Ferry, Dr. Strong, Prince Selma, George G., Direct Queen, Consuelo G., Mary Gage, Alexander, Stanley Dillon and Lady Alice Hamilton, all trotting stars of the rand Circuit.

The third event waited for the "Memphis Gold Cup" is on for Tuesday, and Dillon and Major Delmar will probably be the only starters, although nine horses named.

Thursday the race for three-year-olds, the Kentucky Stock Farm Stake; Dariel, and Grace Bond, in an Auburn Handicap; Dan Patch (the two 1. ter by Bingen, 2.09¼, each) together.

100 TO 1 SHOT WON THE RACE

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Over $100,000 was taken out of the betting ring when Lady Henrietta, a 100 to 1 shot, won the third race at Morris Park. The entire field of twenty-two horses ran well down to the dip, when Lady Henrietta leaped to the front and coasted under the wire, five lengths in the lead. The five furlongs was run in :57⅗, which equals the world's record for a two-year-old.

YALE HOLDS THE SEASON'S HIGH HONORS

Looking through the list of scores for the season impresses one with the fact that large scores aren't so prevalent as they have been in bygone years. The "Big Four" have been given harder battles than ever before.

Yale holds the honor of being the team to roll up the largest number of points, having registered 119 against blank for her opponents; Carlisle, with 104, is second; Amherst, with 91, third; Exeter fourth, Harvard fifth, Cornell sixth, Princeton and Columbia tied for seventh, and Dartmouth eighth.

ST. ALPHONSUS FOOTBALL MEN

One of the strong local athletic football teams will be the St. Alphonsus A. A., of Roxbury, and the eleven is rounding into shape under the coaching of Charley Kiley. To-morrow the team goes to Norwood to play its first game with the team of that town.

Some experienced players have been secured by the association, and games will be played every Saturday during the season with such teams as the Roxbury A. A., City Point Catholic A. A. and East Boston Catholic Association.

The players are Humphrey McCarron, centre; Deino and Toohy, guards; Crowley and Lyons, tackles; J. Donnell and Bowman, ends; Shine, quarterback; Jim Hurley and Jack McDermott, halves; Tim Murphy, fullback. Daily practice is being taken in the large gymnasium of the association.

REFEREES CHOSEN FOR GAME

J. B. Pendleton, of Bowdoin, will be referee; Harry L. Dadum, of Worcester Technical School, will be umpire, and Fred Moon will be head linesman at the Dartmouth-Williams game, which will be played at Newton Centre to-morrow.

DIAMOND CUP PRIZE FOR AUTOISTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Another event has been added to the program for the Brighton Beach Automobile meet of October 22. It will be a five-mile race for the Diamond Cup, a trophy that must be won three times before it becomes the property of the manufacturer whose car is used. This handsome piece of silver is of particular interest at this time, for it has been won twice by the Ford car, once with Barney Oldfield driving and the second time with Tom Cooper at the wheel, and twice by Oldfield with Peerless.

If either Frank Kulick or Barney Oldfield should capture it at the Brighton meet it will become his property. At other times in the past two years the cup has been won by F. A. La Roche, H. H. Lytle and Carl G. Fisher. Oldfield has won it four times, but had different machines each time except this year. The event is a free-for-all, permitting the fast foreign and American machines to meet.

Invitations have been extended to all the drivers who participated in the Vanderbilt Cup race to try their skill at the strictly American style of automobile racing. Heath declined to take chances on the mile course while the others have announced their intention of sailing for home. Gabriel alone seems anxious to make a match of some sort with Oldfield, Hawley, Tracy or Bernin.

CHELSEA'S BIG CHAMP GAME

The first championship game in the Junior Interscholastic League will be played Saturday on Chelsea Oval, between Brockton High and Chelsea High, the game being scheduled at 10 a. m.

Captain Kincaid, of the Chelsea team has recovered from the injury received in the game with Medford High and will be in the first important contest to-morrow.

Chelsea has beaten Medford High and East Boston High so far this season, and is out for a big record.

CUNNIFF, HARVARD'S BIG RUSHER.

Cunniff, who has been playing centre this season at Soldiers' Field, is one of the heaviest and at the same time fastest men in the squad. He weighs about 220 pounds and carries himself like a much lighter player. He was ineligible to play last season, as he came as a special student from B. U. Law School. He is out with an injury at present and will not accompany the team to West Point.

ROXBURY PUG WANTS BOUTS

Jack Hoar, the two-handed mit artist from Roxbury, who fights at the light-weight limit, says that his record is the cleanest of any of the local boys who earn their living at the glove-manipulating game, having never tasted defeat.

"I have not been in the ring since last January, and any of the local lads who think I am easy can try me out. I would like to get on at either of the Cambridge clubs, and am sure that I would give satisfaction," writes Hoar.

GOOD THINGS OUT TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

MORRIS PARK RACE TRACK, Oct. 14.—It may be well to keep an eye upon April Shower, Daisy Green and Panique in their respective races to-day. Rob Roy has been working well and will be played to-day, while Wotan is almost sure to start right back again from his race of yesterday. If you go on strict racing form the result hinges between Isabana and April Shower. The latter has improved greatly of late and is right at his best. Brooks like he is going to beat the Drake filly this afternoon. Early Eve is good for third.

CRIMSON KICKERS QUICKLY BRACE UP

BY ROBERT P. KERNAN.

Captain Harvard 1902 Eleven.

As the players trudged into the locker building after the hard practice one could account for the feeling of satisfaction which surrounded the coaches who followed them. The principle cause for this optimism was the reappearance of Captain Hurley in the scrimmages, but that was not all. The earmarks of real football cropped out many times during the line-up, and if the men can only hold their present pace during the next week, one can say safely that the Harvard eleven has begun to start.

It is none too soon, surely, with West Point, Carlisle and Pennsylvania staring them in the face. In fact, if they slump to-morrow against the Cadets, the game will be a sad affair from a Harvard point of view.

Former Cripples Back.

Several men escaped from the dreaded cripple list, and were back in the scrimmage. Captain Hurley and Nichols played in the halfback positions. Squires was seen at right guard and Hogden was given a little work at left end.

Besides these changes, Barney replaced White at centre and Paul was given Carr's position of right tackle. Paul deserves this trial, as he has played a consistent game throughout the season. Starting as a substitute on the scrub eleven by hard, earnest work, he has passed man after man, until now he stands among the leading candidates for this position. His great handicap is that he does not weigh enough for an ideal tackle.

The most noticeable improvement was in the playing of the backfield trio. Mills, Nichols and Hurley go like whirlwinds, and the only reasons for their not gaining more ground were that they run a trifle blindly, still, and that the forwards did not give them enough assistance. However, to-day's latter fault will be remembered when the men are drilled in team play, and weeks remain to hammer this into them.

Hurley Full of Life.

Hurley seemed to be as full of life and snap as ever, and by his fast work increased the speed of the whole backfield. Nichols ran well, and Mills was as effective as ever.

On the defense, these men were in every play, following the ball continually. Their only fault was that they did not tackle fierce enough. Nichols especially missing a couple of beautiful chances to throw the runner for a loss.

Hogden, Lowry and Shurtleff appeared to the best advantage among the ends, although Hall lacks nothing but weight to make him a star player. His playing in the open field was perfect, and his tackling always low and hard.

Meier acted as if he were getting a little "fine," so was taken out of the practice and given a rest. He has been called upon to do much hard work this season, and a rest until to-morrow probably will do him a great deal of good. Paul worked hard at the other tackle position, and undoubtedly will be started in the West Point game unless the doctor's allow Stetson to go in for a few minutes.

Parker and Squires, the guards, are picking up point after point, from Lewis, and it will not be many days before people realize what a formidable pair these two make in the centre of the line. Squires was given several chances to carry the ball, and he showed exceptional ground gaining ability.

Barney Not In Form.

Barney has not struck his gait yet, the fight being a tame one between White and him. When Parkinson and Cunniff start playing, there will surely be a shake-up among the centre candidates.

Brill, Gresop, Derby and Parkinson were in the field, and did some hard running. It is only a matter of a few days before these men will be in the scrimmage. This is fortunate, especially in the case of Brill, as he is an extremely green man, and needs a great amount of coaching in order to learn the game as played in college.

JACK DALY BESTED BY KID GRIFFO

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14.—After an absence of nearly half a dozen years, Jack Daly made his reappearance in the ring at the Broadway Athletic Club against Kid Griffo, and during the eighteen minutes of milling he came out second best. Griffo and youth, strength and weight in his favor, and he used his physical advantages to the best. Daly appearing unable to hurt his clever opponent with any of his punches.

Jack used a most peculiar left-handed chop, but the only advantage that seemed to give him was in standing Griffo's aggressive tactics off for the time being. After the second round Griffo invariably took the initiative in the milling, and Daly usually clinched or hung on until fairly wrenched apart by the referee.

BEST SEASON IN BASEBALL HISTORY

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—According to unofficial figures, compiled since the close of the baseball season, the attendance at games of the two major leagues aggregated nearly 6,000,000. It has been the greatest season in the history of the national game.

Not only have the crowds been larger than in any other year, but the enthusiasm has been more marked. The grand total of attendance at the American League games was 3,004,550 and that of the National League 2,774,701. Up to the end of July the National had drawn better, but with the pennant practically won by the Giants, interest dropped and the younger league forged steadily ahead.

The Boston Americans proved the best money makers in the American League. Their total attendance for home was 421,155, an average of 8,559 against the Giants' average of 9,101. The other clubs drew nearly in the order in which they finished the season.

Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood on 'Limited Marriage'

HAVING investigated for myself while I was there, I know that there is a very large class of people in Paris who live together for a limited time, say one year, ten years or for a lifetime, just as they choose. The plan is similar in a way to that suggested by George Meredith, and is known as the "college system." The woman retains her own name if she so chooses.

They live together as man and wife —notify their friends that they are going to live so. They simply hold a she has her "dot," and from the time reception to celebrate the occasion. a French girl is born something is set They do not lose their caste in society, aside for this "dot." But in order to be married legally she must be advertised in a public place for a certain length of time—perhaps three months. Then she must be married by the mayor (or maire as they spell it) of the city, where the marriage contract is signed and witnessed.

Then she must be married in the church, where she must pay for the ceremony, and where all her friends are expected to put a gold piece on the place set aside for this purpose.

Something of this same sort and for this same reason exists in Austria, an Episcopalian clergyman has told me.

What may come to us in America of a similar nature we cannot tell, so many strange and unexpected things have happened.

On account of the laxness in the culture and care of children—many improvident marriages are made—that divorce often becomes necessary to save the life of the wife or to preserve any sort of harmony in the home.

Lax divorces should everywhere be deprecated. I have tried about two hundred divorce cases, and have refused to take numbers of cases, where I thought divorce had been injudiciously considered.

Personally I could not and would not live with an habitual drunkard or a habitual criminal. Both of these I have had at the door of that one sin; and no woman should be expected to do it.

LOOK FOR AND OPEN YOUR OWN DOORS; DO NOT DEPEND ON OTHERS TO HELP YOU

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal-Examiner.

LETTERS frequently come to me containing requests for financial assistance from utter strangers.

The requests often take the tone of a command. Two recently were expressed in terms something like the following: "Do not refuse my request and compel me to believe that all your fine ideas are only talk, and that you do not practice what you preach."

Now the writers of letters like this will never be anything but beggars and leaners until they change their manner of thinking. So long as they believe that money must come to them without personal endeavor, and by commanding other people to give, and that the person who has money is a hypocrite, unless he gives it to them, so long they will lag along the highways of life, mendicants and dependents.

Worthy, industrious and capable persons have been reduced by unforeseen disasters and accidents to a condition of temporary poverty and even beggary. But such individuals do not appeal for aid in the manner quoted above. That is the tone of the mental trump—the person who believes the world owes him a living, and that it is his right to sit down and wait till the world pays the debt. It is the attitude of the man who has brought on his own distress by lack of application, too great deliberation, poor work or a too great dependence upon the occupations offered him.

A young man (a stranger) who wrote me recently asked me for the name of some charitable person who would lend him money through college as he was highly indignant because I sent him instead a little advice about developing his own character and finding the way to obtain an education without incurring debt.

A little book upon the subject of Concentration and Will Power, which has helped many a man by the hour, was suggested to him.

He sends back a letter of what he terms "Time-worn Advice," and accuses me of having a financial interest in the book I suggested. No amount of money, not the wealth of the trusts combined, will make that young man a success until he changes his way of thinking. Resentment, contempt for "time-worn ideas" and a tendency to mistrust the motives of others will not produce a noble man, no matter how highly educated he may become. Such moods as this youth allowed to dominate his mind, when sending back my very good letter, are developing the baser and meaner tendencies of his brain, and he is setting unworthy vibrations into motion, which will make great trouble for him in the future.

A poor young man of my acquaintance (poor, although reared in comparative wealth until a lad of ten) determined to take a college course. In the city where he was born, and among the associates of his affluent childhood, he entered college and worked his way through the first two years by waiting on table and doing all sorts of menial tasks. Since that time he has "enjoyed" his vacation months by working as boat hand, book agent, artist at a reformatory institution and farm hand. He has been able to reach his senior year without putting himself under financial obligations to any one, and he will graduate next June, with a large stock of experience to add to his Book Wisdom.

These are the men who make the bone and sinew of any land.

What this young man who asked for a loan needs to do is to find the wealth of divine power within himself—to dig for it and develop it, instead of looking for financial aid from any one else. Not more than one human being in one thousand is benefited by a loan. The other 999 are hindered and handicapped by it.

In this country to-day no man or women need remain ignorant. The schools of correspondence, the night schools and the industrial training departments connected with many colleges all open a way to education for the determined and industrious.

The best education in the world comes through the effort to find the way to open doors for ourselves—not through having others open them for us.

Strange Contrasts in International Life

By Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THERE is no contradiction, but nevertheless true, that American capital, labor-saving machinery and our manufactures are driving foreigners are taking possession of England, while in America English capital, English goods and English manufactures are actually causing the ascendency and control commercially.

All our great manufacturers, inventors and patentees of economic devices have branches in London and are unable to supply the present demand which has come during the unprecedented prosperity of England.

The infusion of American blood, American ways and American business and the push and energy of our business men have awakened a new life in the English business world, and even in spite of the social life in London which has brought many changes in their old-time habits and customs.

Our women, brilliant, tactful, long accustomed to independence of thought and action, are now in command, have married into the highest circle in England and have subdued it from one end to the other. They have introduced some of the more sensible ideas of American life and the daily American money makes their season the most brilliant in the world.

The homes built or purchased, the estates rebuilt and restored by American dollars, are the handsomest, the oldest and most refined in England. The democratic spirit is rapidly spreading throughout England, and the American dollar, example to his people. He has wisely done away with much of the foolish and tiresome in his official life, constantly studying to change or adjust the old-time customs to modern needs.

While England is becoming more democratic and breaking down the barriers of a monarchical government, we seem to be developing British aristocracy, and are introducing customs royalty is only too glad to adopt, and which will bring only criticism and ridicule upon those in this country who have been guilty of such absurdities.

For our President, as our chief executive, to receive a titled foreigner with whatever pomp and ceremony he may be, or position may entitle him, to show him every courtesy while our guest, is proper, and we as a nation expect it. Our standing and honor are at stake, and we wish the dignity of our nation sustained. But for a wealthy citizen who has made his money in pork, beer, lands, dry goods, or any of our industries, to attempt to entertain such a guest in royal splendor is absurd, and has caused many a titled foreigner to smile.

However, our social life in America today is rapidly tending that way. The wealthy people are to-day in control of what is considered by the public "Society" in New York, Washington and our large cities are adopting customs and social rules taken from foreign courts, but are used there only on state occasions.

Persons of high position in England, or, in fact, in any European court, are the simplest and most unassuming of people, and dislike, above all things, the tiresome ceremonious affairs they are obliged often to be a part of. In their own homes there is always sensible dignity and absolute ease, with an evident sincere hospitality and not the desire to display which is so frequently see in America.

A crease among fashionable people in this country exists and is increasing for everything English—horses, saddlery, gloves, clothes, "traps," cloths, china, glass, decorations and in fact any our fashionable drink is brandy and soda.

In many houses only English servants are employed. All these are influencing our people of wealth, who are becoming more English than ways every day.

English capital is sought to develop and further our industries. We find them large stockholders in many of our railroads, banks and commercial enterprises. There is naturally a mutual interest between the two countries which presages the control of trade. But Americans should remain Americans and not become the "impersonators" on the stage of nations.

MARRIED to MYSTERY

Boston American's Thrilling Story of Present-Day Life in Boston

"You can bear witness as to his cruelty to me—that he struck me—and that he left the house to go—to some one whom he preferred to me?"

"It shall be worth your while," put in Tweedledum, advancing and slipping something into the footman's hand. "Mrs. Pangbourne has always spoken of you as a good servant, Benson, and one to whom she has every confidence. You will stand by her in this trouble? It will assure your place—and a good bit more besides."

The footman glanced from the corner of his eyes at the speaker, and his left lid quivered with the merest suggestion of a wink. Benson was intimate with the affairs of his master.

"Benson's all right," said Tweedledum, "and he will know just what to say. Cruelty, eh? Neglect covering a long period of time. How long have you been in Mrs. Pangbourne's service, Benson?"

"Fifteen months, sir."

"Slight. Then you recognized this neglect from the start. You know that Pangbourne has forsaken his wife—for others. You have seen escorted notes—"

"Like the one I handed Mr. Pangbourne this evening. Yes, sir." The footman grinned.

"Just so. You have seen Mrs. Pangbourne with tears in her eyes, you have heard angry discussions between them—"

"I thought once I heard a blow—"

"Just as you saw one this evening. That is excellent, Benson. I see you understand what is needed of you. I'll talk the whole matter over with you in a few days. At present Mrs. Pangbourne is too much upset. I think you can go."

The footman was about to retire, when he was arrested by a call from Violet.

"And, Benson, you will bolt the front door from the inside to-night. And on no pretence are you to readmit my husband, you understand?"

"Yes, lady." Then, after a pause, "I don't believe he has gone out yet, my lady."

"Then go and help him on with his coat and see him out. I won't have him in the house another minute."

The footman left the room. It was the sound of his footsteps on the stairs which hastened the departure of Pangbourne.

"That's all right," Tweedledum sat himself down again on the sofa by Violet's side and mopped his forehead with a large handkerchief, for the room was warm and he bore the heat badly. "We've done better to-night, Vi, than even I expected."

Violet leaned back lazily with her head resting on a handsomely embroidered cushion. She had picked up a silver mirror and was examining the small wound upon her cheek. Her full neck was covered with bracelets and her fingers glittered with diamonds.

"The brute—he has cut my cheek," she said.

"Never mind," laughed Tweedledum. "In press the fact upon your maid when you go upstairs. It is all evidence, and we have got plenty to go on with to-night. I didn't hope to advance as quickly as this. We shall have some more before the night is out, I expect," he added.

"What do you mean?" She looked at him curiously.

"Why, it's very simple. Let us consider for a moment that you love your husband—"

"Impossible."

"For the purposes of the divorce you must at least have been attached to him. After a quarrel, in which he strikes and insults you, he leaves the house—avowedly to go to the writer of the letter which you hold. You are a jealous wife. What does it occur to you that you would do under the circumstances?"

"Go after him, I suppose."

"Just so. Up and that is what you must do, after, of course, allowing a decent interval for recovery from the shock of his brutal treatment—and the subject at the same time allowing your husband time to make some progress in his prospective undertaking. Let me see," he continued in a business-like manner, "it's nearly 11 now. I think we'll wait an hour and then take a cab to Mrs. Willoughby's, of course, go with you as the indignant friend who was present when the injured husband was discurred and who wishes to patch it up for you if possible. It will be well to have my evidence of whatever we may discover at Mrs. Willoughby's."

"I see," said Violet. "It sounds all right. But how are we going to account for the quarrel that led to his striking me?"

"Why, that's very simple. What more compelling of his infidelities and he resented it."

"But he will say what he saw."

"Let him. He has no witness. It's only his word against yours, and in these cases the sympathy of a jury is always with the woman if she looks as distracting as you will know how to look, and plays her part as well as you will know how to play yours. There's absolutely no evidence that he can bring forward which will involve me in any way with you. We've been careful enough about that."

"Yes, it seems all right," she admitted, "and I think we ought to be able to go ahead pretty quickly now. In an hour you say? Very well, George, I'll put an hour I'll go and get ready, and half an hour we can have in conference."

The corners of Tweedledum's mouth went down. He had hoped to be let off and smoke during the interval.

When at last she returned to the hall ready she found that Tweedledum had secured a hansom and was waiting for her. He had been amusing himself by giving substantial instructions to Benson while he smoked and drank freely of whisky and soda.

So they got into the cab and drove off.

"Luckily it's only a little way," said Tweedledum. "We shall be there in a few minutes."

"What do you propose to do when we get there?" asked Violet. "Will the fact of his being in Lillian's company at the time of the night help our case much? We shall put him on his guard when we bring the girl in."

"We won't ring the bell," said the man, with his short, explosive laugh. "I've arranged for all that."

"What! Have you a key?"

"Yes," he chuckled. "I've got the key. We can find her ourselves in bed and explore the rooms."

"Oh!" But what will be said to that proceeding at the trial?"

"Why, we can swear that the door was not shut. People will be so negligent. We ring the bell, of course, and it was found unanswered. Then we just walked in. It's all simple enough, and Lillian will bear us out."

NEW WAYS FOR GIRLS TO

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Your best advice to readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN has been of such great help to me, I know, that I am emboldening that some one would ask your advice upon the following problem, which have set me in quite a distressful position. I am a girl of 17 and have been going the same way

I granted a favor to a young man to go walking, and during our stroll he presented me with a box, which on opening I found to be some very fine perfume. Since then I received a letter from him, appealing for the same pleasure. I fear I have done wrong in consenting to his wish. I surmise that from the character of his letter that he seeks my continual company, which I only granted to him that one night, as any girl would to a friend. Would you advise me to accept his letter? I never corresponded with men and would not care to do so on this occasion. I have no intention of going out with him again, only on acquaintance, as I wish to disappoint a fine young man, because I know he has a tender heart for some good girl who deserves his company as a lover. I am not self-conceited, because I know I have acquired good knowledge from your motherly talks to girls. M. E. S.

STRELY you can be friends with a young man without his thinking you have any serious intentions. But as such I think I would not accept presents from him. It would do no harm to answer his note. Couldn't you ask him to call at your home and see you?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl nineteen years old, and have been keeping company with a young gentleman twenty-four years old for over a year. He proposed and I accepted him, and my parents approved of the match. This Summer he and I have been separated, and for the last few weeks he has not answered my letters. Do you think he is false? There is another young man who is very much in love with me, but I don't love him. How long had I better wait for explanations from my apparent friend? Please advise me, for I feel awfully. Our engagement was not announced. M. F.

I CANNOT advise you just how long you should wait for the young man, as it depends a great deal on the circumstances, which I do not know. Can you not make some effort to find out about him and demand an explanation? Ask your parents to help you about it.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

During my vacation last Summer I became infatuated with a young gentleman. Now I am desirous of becoming better acquainted, so upon leaving him I asked him to please send me a souvenir card, and he sent me one. Would it be proper for me to acknowledge the receipt of said card by writes me? S. S. S.

THERE would be no harm in your writing him a friendly little note, thanking him for the card, or you might send him a souvenir postal card in return.

Health and BEAUTY

By Adele O. Lehr

DEAR MISS LEHR:

Please tell me how to get stouter all around (I mean in bust and hips). And to settle an argument, what are considered to be the measurements of a good figure?

M. H.

YOU may not be aware of the fact that at present it is considered quite the thing to have small hips. If, however, you are not stout, nothing is easier than to obtain exercise, preferably bicycle riding, for that will bring you into the fresh air and amusement and develop most rapidly the muscles in that part of your body.

Sometimes massaging with almond, olive or cocoanut oil proves beneficial, though to be of any use to you it must be done by a physical conditions are such that the whole body is gaining flesh, and the skin, through baths and massage, has been made to assimilate nourishment in this way.

To develop the bust there is nothing quite so good as Dr. Vaucaire's remedy, the recipe for which I will give you, as it is sent directly upon the glands and develops the figure speedily:

Lactic acid, 400 grams; lacto-phosphate of lime, 10 grams; tincture of fennel, 10 grams; extract of galega (goat's rue), 10 grams. The dose is two soupspoonfuls in water before every meal, and the drinking of malt extracts during meals is also advised.

By the common agreement of artists, the Greek proportions have been accepted as those of the ideally perfect woman. These require that her height shall be five feet five inches, and when her arms are extended she should measure exactly her height from tip of one middle finger to the other. The length of her hand should be a tenth of her height; her foot just a seventh, and the diameter of her throat, a fifth. Her perineum should be the medial point in the picture, and the knee should come exactly midway between the perineum and the sole. The distance from the elbow to the middle finger should be the same as from elbow to the middle of the chest. From top of the head to the chin should be the same as the foot, and from the chin to the armpits the same measurement. With this given height the waist should measure 27 inches, the bust under the arms, 34 inches, and measured outside, 43. The upper arm should be 12 inches in circumference; the wrist, 6 inches; the thigh, 25; the calf of the leg, 14½, and the ankle, 8 inches, and the weight which this frame can gracefully carry is 138 pounds.

BODICES, BY MRS. OSBORN.

The noted designer of fashionable gowns will give most valuable hints to women about bodices in next Sunday's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Ladies' Costume

No. 6962. 6962.—At the beginning of Spring, when early caffes begin to look for the early Summer trade is centred in the tailor-made costume, and this design is a good example of the popular style, with its plain tailored skirt, and the fancy coat, which may be made in either of two lengths.

In the exceedingly smart design shown here the coat is simply braided and the front gored to give the shaping so necessary to follow out in the tailored fashion. The back is made in much like those of the front, while shaping gives a graceful adjustment. The sleeves are of the three-quarter length and finished with a flaring belt may be omitted. Provision is made for putting on a cuff, which is the latest pattern and provides for the regular or lapped seams. The skirt is in the fashionable five gored.

The skirt is the new seven-gored flare, with regular or lapped seams, and may be made in slip, round or basket length, and the under-plait may be omitted if desired. The coat pattern is provided with a lining that does not change materially from season to season, and is in the sleeves of the blouse.

A feature of the costume not to be overlooked is the difference in the quantity of cloth which makes it almost as good as three patterns. The coat and skirt may be of cloth and the belt worn of the same cloth, or the coat, or both coat and skirt may be of cloth and the belt of silk, or the coat and another model could be made a walking suit with lapped seams. For ordinary wear it is neat, smart and well adapted to all figures.

When developed in tweed, homespun, cheviot, broadcloth or any of the light-weight cloths, it will be found a most satisfactory style for a general utility gown.

The pattern is cut in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches.

Waist, sizes 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail either of the above patterns upon receipt of 10 cents (or both numbered patterns, 20 cents for both), to cover cost of mailing, etc.

All orders should be directed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 2329, Boston, Mass.

PAYS $1,100 FOR FAMOUS 1804 DOLLAR

W. F. Dunham Now Has a Complete Collection of United States Coins.

SOLD AT COLLECTORS' CLUB

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—W. F. Dunham, a druggist of Chicago, was the purchaser of the United States dollar of 1804, which was put up at auction at the Collectors' Club, No. 501 Fourth avenue. The price paid was $1,100. This was the most valuable coin in the collection of H. G. Brown, of Portland, Ore., which is now for sale. It is one of the thirteen dollars of this date known to the Negro list. Its last appearance at a public sale was in Philadelphia in May, 1885, when it was sold to J. F. Dexter for $1,000. It was known as the Dexter dollar from this sale.

Mr. Dunham needed only this coin to make his collection of United States coins complete. He made the trip here from Chicago for the special purpose of securing it.

Geoffrey Charlton Adams, A. M., at a meeting of the Chicago Numismatic Society on September 2, read a paper on the 1804 dollar in which he said that not one of these coins can "be traced or authenticated." Among other things the paper contains the following:

"It is a well established fact that no dollars were coined by the United States in 1804, those bearing this date being charitably designated as "restrikes," and were undoubtedly struck since steam coinage was invented, or from 1836 to 1860. The dies were out of possession of the Government for several weeks, presumably not to be admired, but for the purpose of striking copies for dispersal and sale.

"The ones in the Philadelphia Mint collection are obviously modern (rands, and any and all so-called 1804 dollars ever turned up cannot be traced or authenticated. There is also no doubt that the so-called dollars were at no time connected with the regular United States coinage, nor were they legally issued as dollars at any time. Some were struck at the Mint in about the year 1860, through the political influence of R. L. Stuart, the old sugar refiner, and other noted collectors of that period, but the coinage of them aroused such a disturbance that most all of them were returned to the Government; but there is no evidence that they ever reached the melting pot."

Of the "Dexter 1804 dollar," sold yesterday, Mr. Adams's paper said:

"When the purchaser (Dexter) discovered its fishy authenticity, he commenced suit for the purchase price, and the deal slow as to its genuineness was left to Mint employees, who never were and never will be experts or numismatists in any sense of the word. They decided (!) that, because it contained the proper amount of silver and looked natural," it was genuine. So they did with the notorious 1823 counterfeit cents.

"The carefully prepared list of 1804 dollars which John A. Nexon printed in the Journal of Numismatics over years ago, contained just thirteen specimens, but, as thirteen is a somewhat unlucky number, let us add eight more, making twenty-one known, for at least eight more have turned up since that time, and there may be others."

SHAFT TO HERO OF BUNKER HILL

NORRIDGEWOCK, Me., Oct. 14.—A monument has been erected here to the memory of a hero of the battle of Bunker Hill. It bears the name of Major John Moor, who was a captain in General Stark's regiment of New Hampshire volunteers. When the British charged up the historic slope to fought so bravely that when the major of the command was killed in the fight he was promoted to the French vacancy. He was a veteran of the French and Indian Wars and served in the Revolution from Bunker Hill to Yorktown. He was an early settler of this town and one of its most notable citizens.

ON THE SAFETY OF OVER-EATING.

The Rule of Choosing the Lesser of Two Evils Applies to the Way You Eat.

I want to know how a man is to know when he has had enough?

The Pilgrim Fathers, I believe, had a quaint saying to the effect that you should always rise from the table feeling as if you could eat some more.

But the question is, how much more?

Just when to stop?

That's the point.

The rule is wrong, because it's no rule at all. It is inexact and unscientific.

It is likely to lead to the dangerous habit of eating too little.

And eating too little—or digesting too little, which amounts to the same thing—is the cause of nine-tenths of the diseases from which humanity suffers to-day.

What is disease?

It is simply uneven balance between waste and repair.

Some organ lacks strength to carry on the special work for which it was created.

Where shall it find the strength it lacks?

In drugs?

Ten thousand time, NO!

Better die than become a hopeless drug fiend.

No; in food.

"But," you say, "I eat a plenty of good food every day!"

True, dear friend; but you don't digest it.

And food, undigested, is mere poison.

So, to make food do you good, you must take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

The great thing about Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is, that their action does not depend upon stimulative properties.

They cannot create a habit.

They contain no ingredient to "pick-you up," "tone up your nervous system," or furnish wishy energy, by calling out your vital reserve force.

They create new strength, tone and energy—out of your Food.

If taken starving, they will do you no good at all. So, eat to live, and live to eat, with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

The curse of our present civilization is exhaustion.

And exhaustion, whether of brain, nerves, physical strength, or vital force is caused by starvation.

Of two evils, it is better to overeat (and prevent indigestion with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets), than to rise from the table, not having eaten enough to repair the exhaustion of your vital forces.

For exhaustion or starvation leads to the most varied forms of sickness or disease, brought on by inability of the wasted vitality to counteract the disease—poisons, and microbes.

Whereas the well-fed and well-nourished person, without ever feeling worse for it, can expose himself to dangers, the mere thought of which would drive the weak, starveling dyspeptic into a panic fit.

Good food, well digested, is the great secret of a healthful existence here on earth.

So eat heartily, every day, of the best food you can get, and then by the aid of one of your digestive tablets with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

As a result, you will be astonished to find how much stronger and livelier you feel, how much more and better work you can do, how much more pleasure you will get out of life, and how your old enemy, food chronic troubles which has fastened upon you, from stem to stern, will up and disappear, and ever after leave you in peace, health and comfort.

There's more truth than poetry in all this. Try it, now.

The Bread Line and the Pie Line

How Both of Them Can Be Abolished

Mr. Opper has a very funny cartoon on this page. But it is also a serious picture. He draws two pictures on one piece of paper, and that is proper. Each pictures a condition. If you have one condition you have the other.

The top picture is that of a bread line. You know what a bread line is. The founder of a bread line died a few weeks ago in New York. But while the good baker established a bread line, HE DID NOT MAKE THE MATERIAL TO FILL IT.

The bread lines are recruited from the ranks of those who were victims of unjust men or unjust systems. Unjust systems are increasing, and the New York bread line, which was once unique, for it was the only one, is being imitated all over the country by fortunate men, who seek to relieve their unfortunate fellows from the unfair and unjust acts of systems controlled by men who respect neither law nor human rights.

The lower picture makes you laugh when you see the Sugar Trust lifting old Common People out of the line on the toe of his kidney-footed shoe.

The Steel Trust has passed the pie counter. He makes the American railroad owners pay him $8 a ton more for rails than he makes the European road owner pay. The railroad owner passes the $8 charge, with interest, along to the man who rides on a ticket, not on a pass, and to the merchant and farmer, who ship corn and wheat and cattle and get back dry goods, coffee and sugar. The merchant cannot pay the $8 additional freight every day in the year, along with contributions to other trusts, and he fails and fails again, and along with other failing men, he may get into the bread line.

The farmer, when he pays the $8 freight from the money he gets from the Beef Trust, has none left to pay the interest on the mortgage and to the Reaper-Harvester Trust, and he becomes a renter, and if the crops fail he is near a bread line.

The Coal Trust is getting his pie. He raises the price of your fuel, and fixes the wages of the man that digs it. He may raise you only $25 a year, and that is not much for you, but more coal users earn less than $50 a month than earn more than this. Take this $25 from the cheap-salaried man and you take two weeks of his work. By the time he pays the excess tolls to the Meat Trust, the Sugar Trust and other trusts, he is near the bread line.

Now, the Sugar Trust booted the Common People out of the line. IF THE COMMON PEOPLE KEPT IN THE LINE WITH THE OTHER PEOPLE, THERE WOULD BE EQUALITY AT THE PIE COUNTER. (The man in the window might, however, hand him out a smaller slice, because he is not loud in demanding his rights.)

Abolish the lower line and the upper line will disappear.

Opper will find no working model for such a picture if the law and those who have charge of the law deal it out with an even hand.

But the pie line will pass the window as long as it is open, and the window will stay open as long as the party whose managers are trust breeders and trust-begotten is in power.

AND THE PARTY WITHIN THE WINDOW IS THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

An American Canal by American Labor

Coolie Labor Not Wanted When American Taxpayers Foot the Bill

Seizing on the Black Hand and other crimes charged up against the Italian immigrants, the advocates of the cheapest labor make another plea for admission of the Chinese coolie.

It is a curious law, says one in a letter, that admits the stiletto-slinging Sicilian and bars the oblique-eyed, peace-loving and patient Chinaman. In the course of his remarks the gentleman lets slip a suggestion which we want to call attention to right here. The Chinaman, he says, was an effective worker on the Panama Canal.

Is there a plan afoot to dig the Panama Canal with coolie labor? If there is, it should be thwarted at once. The American people are paying for the canal. The American taxpayers, the bulk of whom are the American farmer and mechanic, must furnish the money.

If American money is to pay for the work, that money should go to American mechanics and laborers. The Panama strip is American territory. The Chinaman should be barred out of it for the same reason he is kept away from the Pacific coast.

American sanitary engineers can make Panama as clean as they did Havana. If the Canal Commission expects, through some loop of law, to import coolies to do the work of American workmen, that body should be ordered at once to prepare for the building of the American canal across the Isthmus of Panama by Americans receiving standard American wages.

Little Editorials from the People

WOULD THIS ENABLE OUR PEOPLE TO CONSUME EVERYTHING PRODUCED HERE?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

If every willing worker in the United States had constant work and received the full earnings of his or her labor, it would enable the inhabitants of this country to buy and to eat everything good that is produced here." One way to bring about such a desirable condition is to tax all land at its full value, and abolish taxes on the products of labor. Land monopolists would then have to use the natural resources that are now held idle by employing labor, sell for any price they could obtain or abandon unused land to those who would put it to use.

Land is the source of our living and the source of all wealth, the natural opportunity in which labor must be applied in order to produce food, clothing, shelter and luxuries. With all kinds of idle land accessible to those willing to apply it to use there would be no lack of employment, and wages in all industries would rise to their natural level, the full earnings of labor. The single tax will do it.

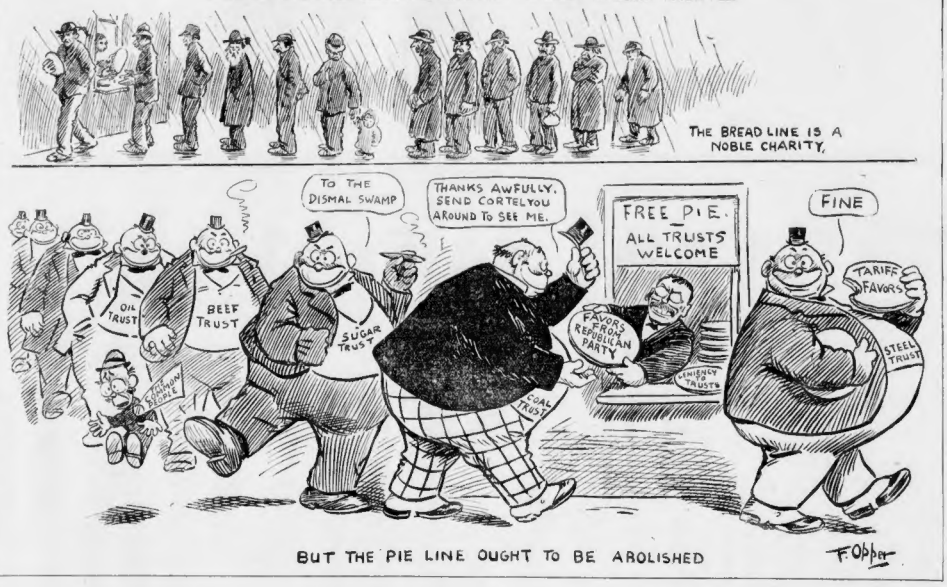
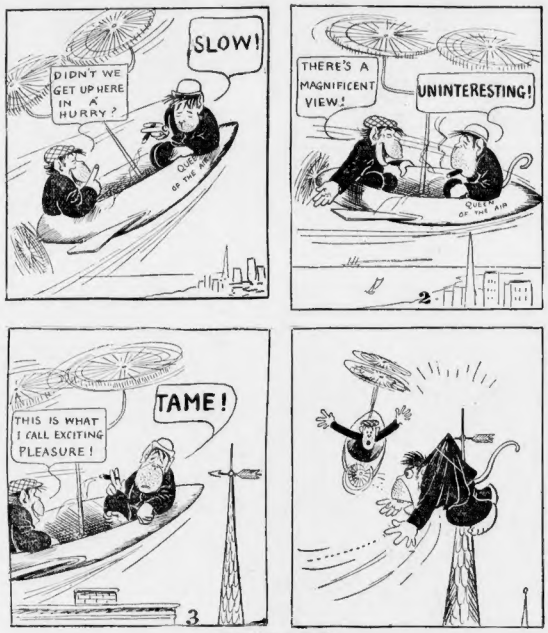
THE GOOD LINE AND THE BAD LINE



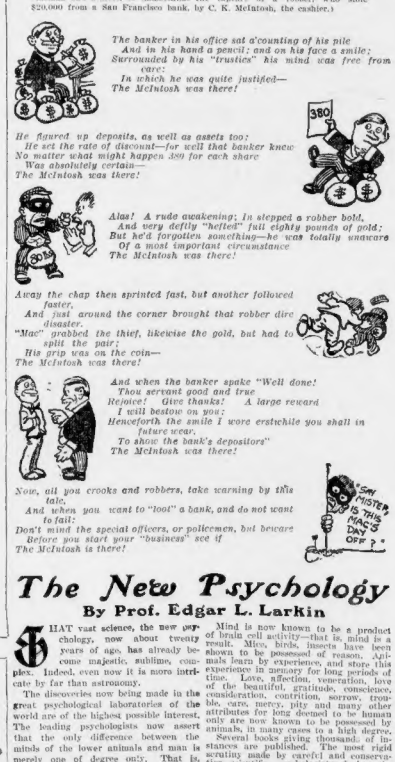
KNOCKO THE MONK



He scorns at an Airship.

By Hermann Oelrichs

(These lines were written by Hermann Oelrichs, the noted millionaire clubman and athlete, to immortalize the capture of a robber, who stole $20,000 from a San Francisco bank, by C. K. McIntosh, the cashier.)



The banker in his office sat a'counting of his pile
And in his hand a pencil; and on his face a smile;
Surrounded by his "trusties" his mind was free from care:
In which he was quite justified—
The McIntosh was there!

He figured up deposits, as well as assets too;
He set the rate of discount—for well that banker knew
No matter what might happen 309 for each share
Was absolutely certain—
The McIntosh was there!

Alas! A rude awakening; in stepped a robber bold,
And very deftly "hefted" full eighty pounds of gold;
But he'd forgotten something—he was totally unaware
Of a most important circumstance
The McIntosh was there!

Away the chap then sprinted fast, but another followed faster,
And just around the corner brought that robber dire disaster.
"Mac" grabbed the thief, likewise the gold, but had to split the pair;
His grip was on the coin—
The McIntosh was there!

And when the banker spake "Well done!
Thou servant good and true
Rejoice! Give thanks! A large reward
I will bestow on you;
Henceforth the smile I wore erstwhile you shall in future wear,
To show the bank's depositors"
The McIntosh was there!

Now, all you crooks and robbers, take warning by this tale,
And when you want to "loot" a bank, and do not want to fail;
Don't mind the special officers, or policemen, but beware
Before you start your "business" see if
The McIntosh is there!

The New Psychology

By Prof. Edgar L. Larkin

WHAT vast science, the new psychology, now about twenty years of age, has already become majestic, sublime, complex. Indeed, even now it is more intricate by far than astronomy.

The discoveries now being made in the great psychological laboratories of the world are of the highest possible interest. The leading psychologists now assert that the only difference between the minds of the lower animals and man is merely one of degree only. That is, minds of men are of the same kind as those of all other animals, but many times stronger.

Careful and long continued experiments have demonstrated that even low types of animals are reason that differs only from that of man in degree.

All organic beings are mere colonies of cells—i. e., cities of individual living entities. At present it is unknown what life is, but each cell is a centre or source of life. Ganglia are nodes or collections of cells into smaller communities; and in the human brain different combinations of the same kind of cells may produce different faculties of mind. For differing associations of the same kind of ultimate corpuscles—there is but one kind—give rise to all the ph ses revealed by ordinary chemistry, and by the spectroscope. The universe is made up of varying combines of life corpuscles into infinite diversity; and variations in thought, from late analysis of mind and brain, seem to be caused by varying clusters together of one kind of brain cells into ganglia.

Mind is now known to be a product of brain cell activity—that is, mind is a result. Men, birds, insects have been shown to be possessed of reason. Animals by experience, and store this experience in memory for long periods of time. Love, affection, veneration, love of the beautiful, gratitude, conscience, consideration, contrition, sorrow, trouble, care, mercy, pity and many other attributes for long deemed to be human only are now known to be possessed by animals, in many cases to a high degree.

Several books giving thousands of instances are published. The most rigid scrutiny made by careful and conservative scientific psychologists during the last twenty years h... been totally unable to detect any trace in body or brain, or find any analogy in nature concerning the existence of what is popularly called the soul. Blood cells build flesh, stomach cells digest and brain cells evolve mind. Psychologists are incapable of finding any difference between the three processes. In the present state of psychic science it is not known what mind is, but whatever it may be it is known that it is caused by the action of brain and nerve cells. When this activity ends all traces of mind cease to an end. Cells that originate mind are far more complex than those that perform the office of secretion in glands. The secretion of mind is of greater complexity than the secretion of bile or gastric fluids. But all are developed by the work of cells.

Perhaps the world is now ready to receive this generalization, thus: The human mind contains no faculty that cannot be found in the minds of animals, in less degree; and in some cases in higher degree. Hence, the latest researches in mind confirm the fundamental law of nature—evolution.
